REPROFILE

When the REPORTER editors prepared this Special Edition we came to one inescapable conclusion. There was no way we could reproduce all the photographs from this year. Nor would it be possible for us to present each and every major issue of the year in these few pages. What we have tried to accomplish, then, is to record the most significant events, people and issues of the year in photographic form.

As is generally the case, we found that our hindsight was precisely accurate. Looking at the whole, we see the tragedy of two fires, and four student deaths, but we also see some balance. We see the enthusiasm that is uniquely collegiate, the intellectual stimulation that is unmatched in any other setting.

The biggest story of the year was undoubtedly the announcement by Dr. Paul Miller that he was leaving the presidency. It seems odd that the biggest story was not about tragedy, nor did it relate to enthusiasm.

It was certainly not tragic for RIT. Dr. Miller can certainly be replaced; he would be the first to stress that. It was also difficult to be enthusiastic about the loss of a man who has given so much to the Institute. The only sense of enthusiasm that was felt at that time was in Ingle Auditorium when he made the announcement. The enthusiastic good wishes of hundreds of people—you could feel it in the air.

We sincerely hope that no individual or group will be slighted by omission. We also hope that no one is offended by our perceptions of this year at RIT.

The editors of REPORTER are pleased to announce that we have again won the highest award in college journalism: The All American. The award, given by the Associated Collegiate Press (ACP), has been earned by REPORTER six times consecutively.

According to the ACP, the All American recognizes, "those publications which exhibit special intelligence, creativity and appeal, as well as basic journalistic excellence."

This award was based on REPORTER'S work through December and represents the hard work of a group of excellent, dedicated people. At the end of the year, I find it appropriate to give my thanks to those people without whom it would have been impossible to produce REPORTER.

Their names are listed above and they are easy to identify. They are the ones who can be seen dragging home, bone weary, at 2:30 in the morning. Or, coming into the College Union at some ungodly hour on Sunday morning. I owe much to these people—it is a debt that can only be paid with my sincerest gratitude.

The staff of REPORTER also owes a debt to those members of the Institute community who continually offer their support, and perhaps more importantly, their constructive criticism. That debt, too, can only be repaid with our gratitude.

The Events That Made Headlines

Undoubtedly the biggest news of the year was the announcement by President Paul Miller that he would leave the presidency by January of next year. It was not, he emphasized, a retirement, nor was it a resignation as he also announced plans to remain at RIT and reactivate his professorships in the Colleges of General Studies and Continuing Education. A Search Committee has been formed to fill the shoes of Miller, an unenviable task.

The Student Association spent most of the Fall and Winter trying to oust then president Craig Schwabach. After an attempt at impeachment failed, the Senate voted nearly unanimously, demanding that Schwabach resign. That attempt also failed and Schwabach made it to the end of his term.

Several of RIT's top administrators journeyed to China in January to exchange conversation on technological education. The 18 day trip provided much to talk about when they returned, and, as befits RIT's reputation, thousands of photographs.

RIT opened its twelfth building on the Academic side of campus this fall. Appropriately named "Building I2", the facility houses the offices and classrooms of the College of Continuing Education. That College was in the limelight again as the Institute announced plans to resurrect the old Mechanics Institute. Billed as yet another effort to "retain the strong ties with industry," it is also hoped to check the serious decline in CCE's enrollment.

As usual, the year started off with a blast—a beer blast, that is—as SOS-7 was accompanied with the usual vast quantities of alcohol. That is not likely for the future as RIT has passed a new Alcohol Control Policy. The Policy is designed to achieve responsible use and avoid abuse of alcohol by RIT students, and to meet the requirements of the insurance company.

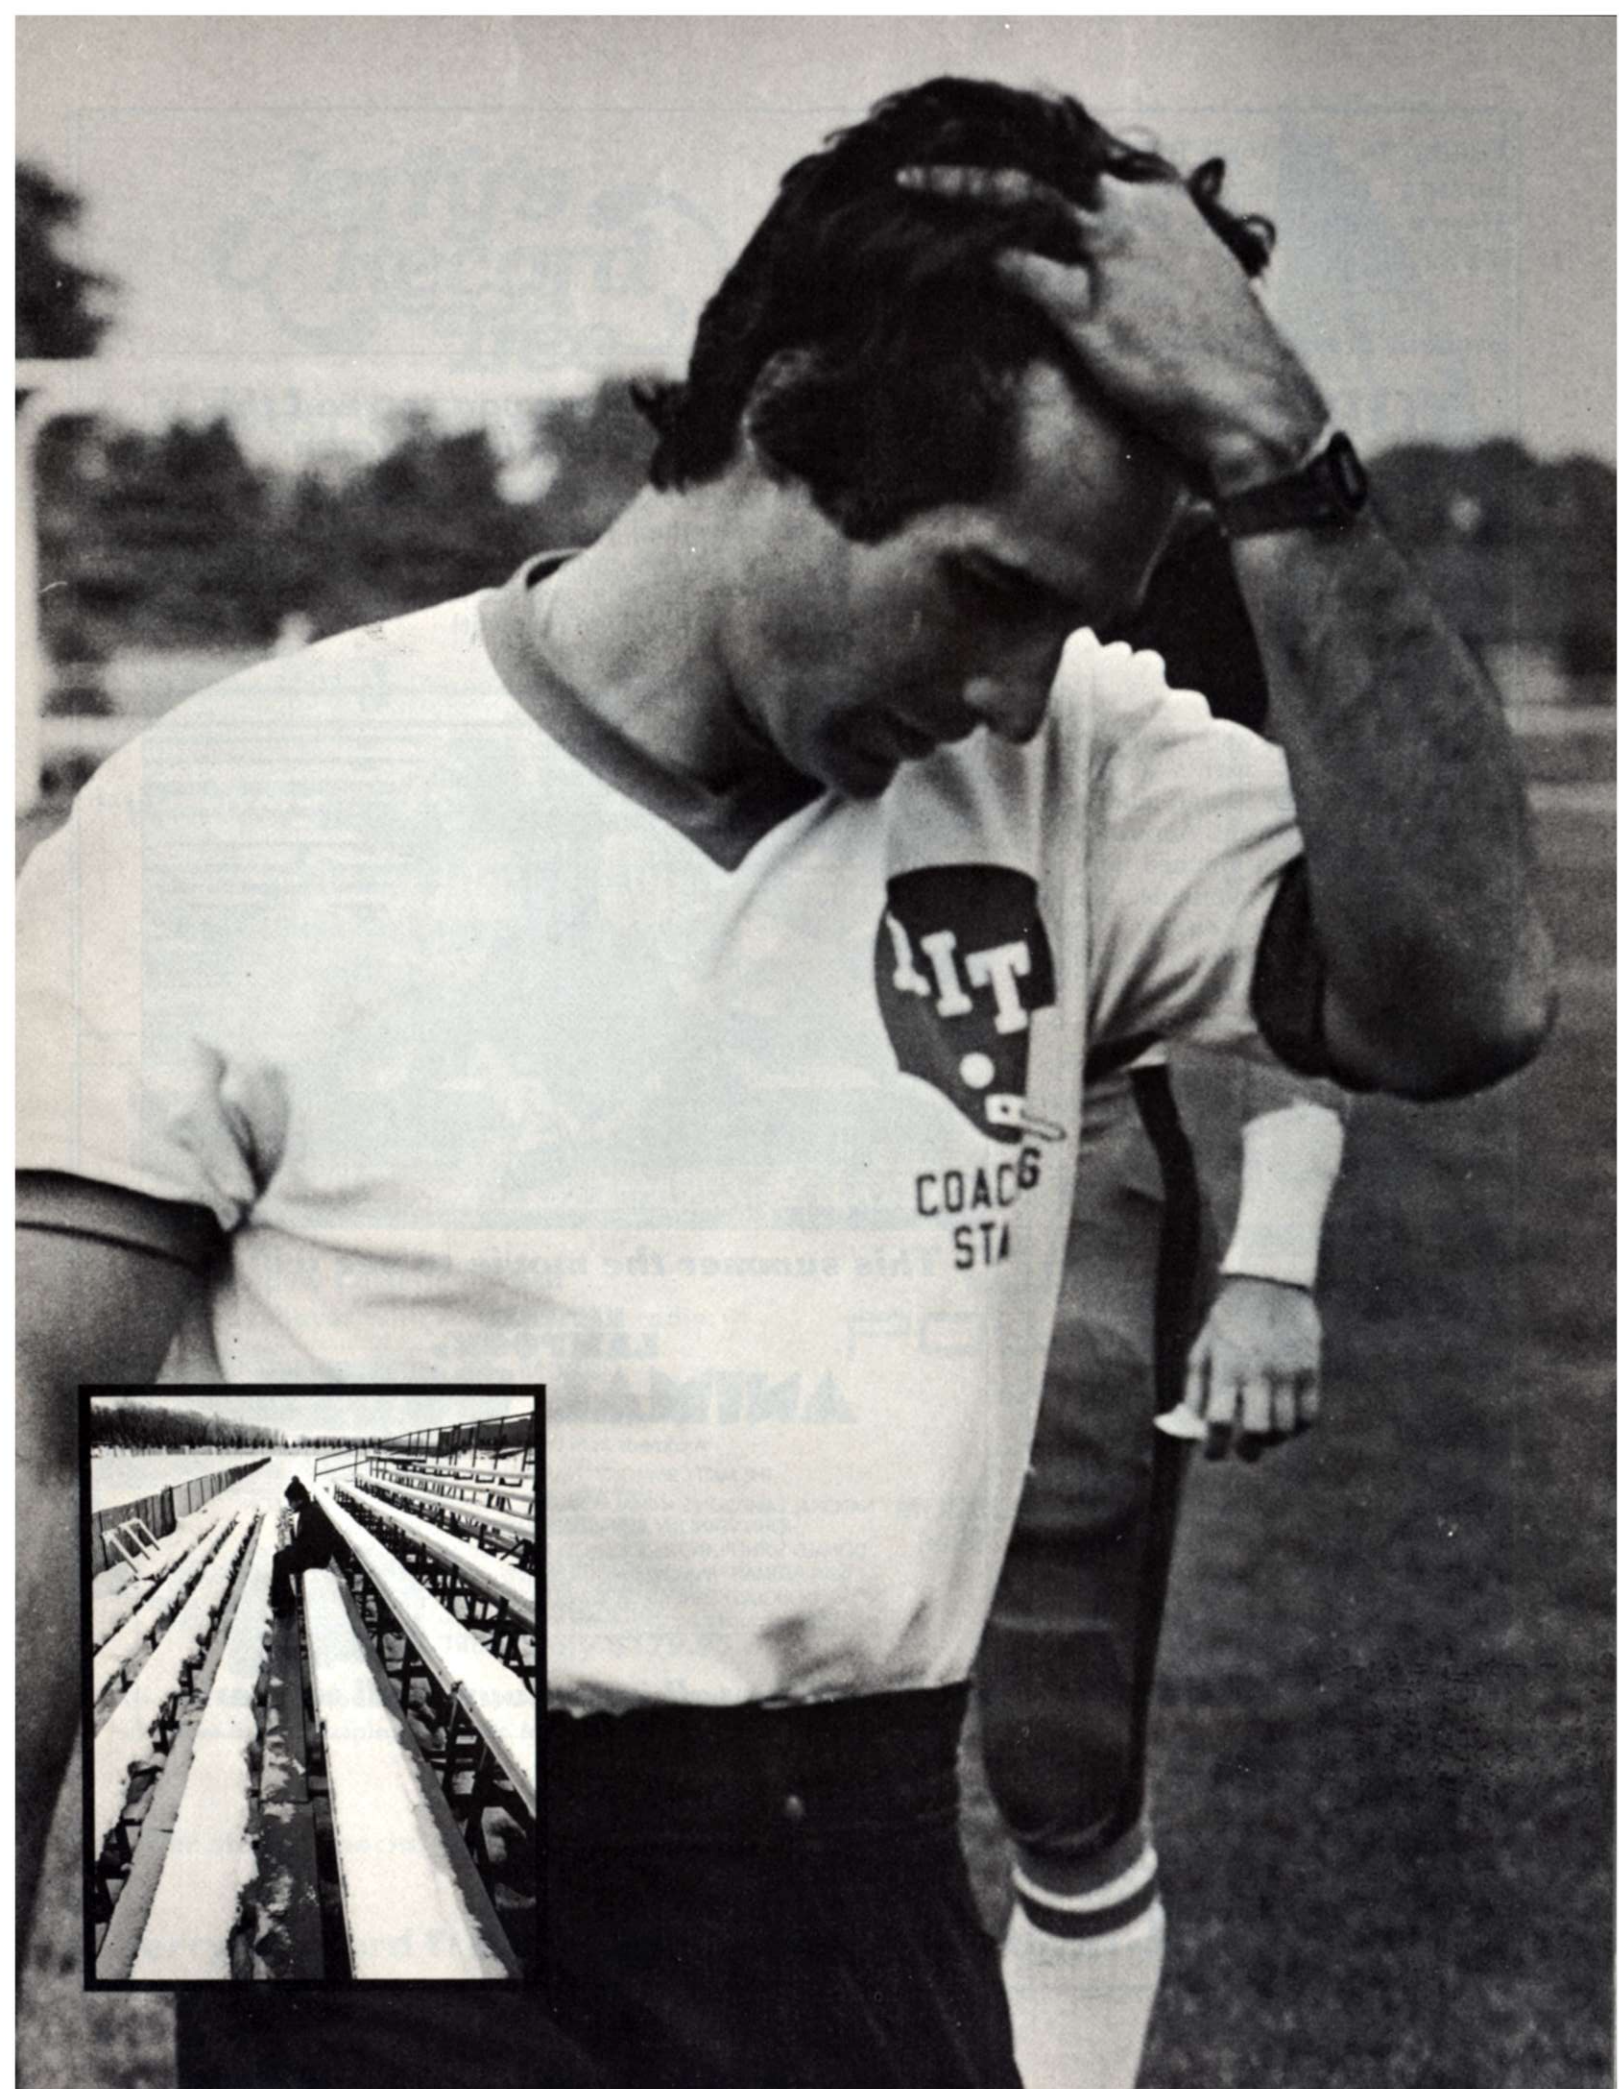

Assistant Varsity Football Coach Fred Recchio holds his head in his hands as RIT Football lost yet another battle. Several months later, Recchio and his boss Lou Spiotti (inset) were holding their heads in their hands again—this time they lost the war. Dr. Miller axed football amid cries that he was being unfair, explaining that it was the fiscally logical thing to do. Dr. Miller asked for no student input into the decision.

Protective Services was in the news as usual. The Task Force on the Eighties complained of a severe gap between expectations and delivery, but students were not so kind. Some likened the security force to the Gestapo, others complained about handcuffing and unresponsiveness. The verdict? Perhaps more casual uniforms and a more healthy attitude.

Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark spoke at length on consumerism to an enthusiastic but small crowd. Dick Gregory mixed message with comedy.

People Who Made The News

Mr. Craig Schwabach weathered the storm — a vote for impeachment, a not guilty verdict by the Student Association Senate committee, and a nearly unanimous vote calling for his resignation notwithstanding — he defended his actions and stayed until the end of his term. At the annual SA banquet Schwabach said, "I think I've done a good job ... we've accomplished a lot."

Dr. Dennis Nystrom (below, left) spent his first year at RIT. He came with a top priority assignment: create and operate the new Division of Career Education.

Dr. Paul A. Miller and his wife Dr. Francena Miller appear at an Orientation function. Sister Mary Sullivan is closing out her freshman year as Dean of the College of General Studies, Mr. Richard 'Dick' Eisenhart was and still is the Chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Dr. Clifford Reifler ran the Clinical Psychology service of Student Health.

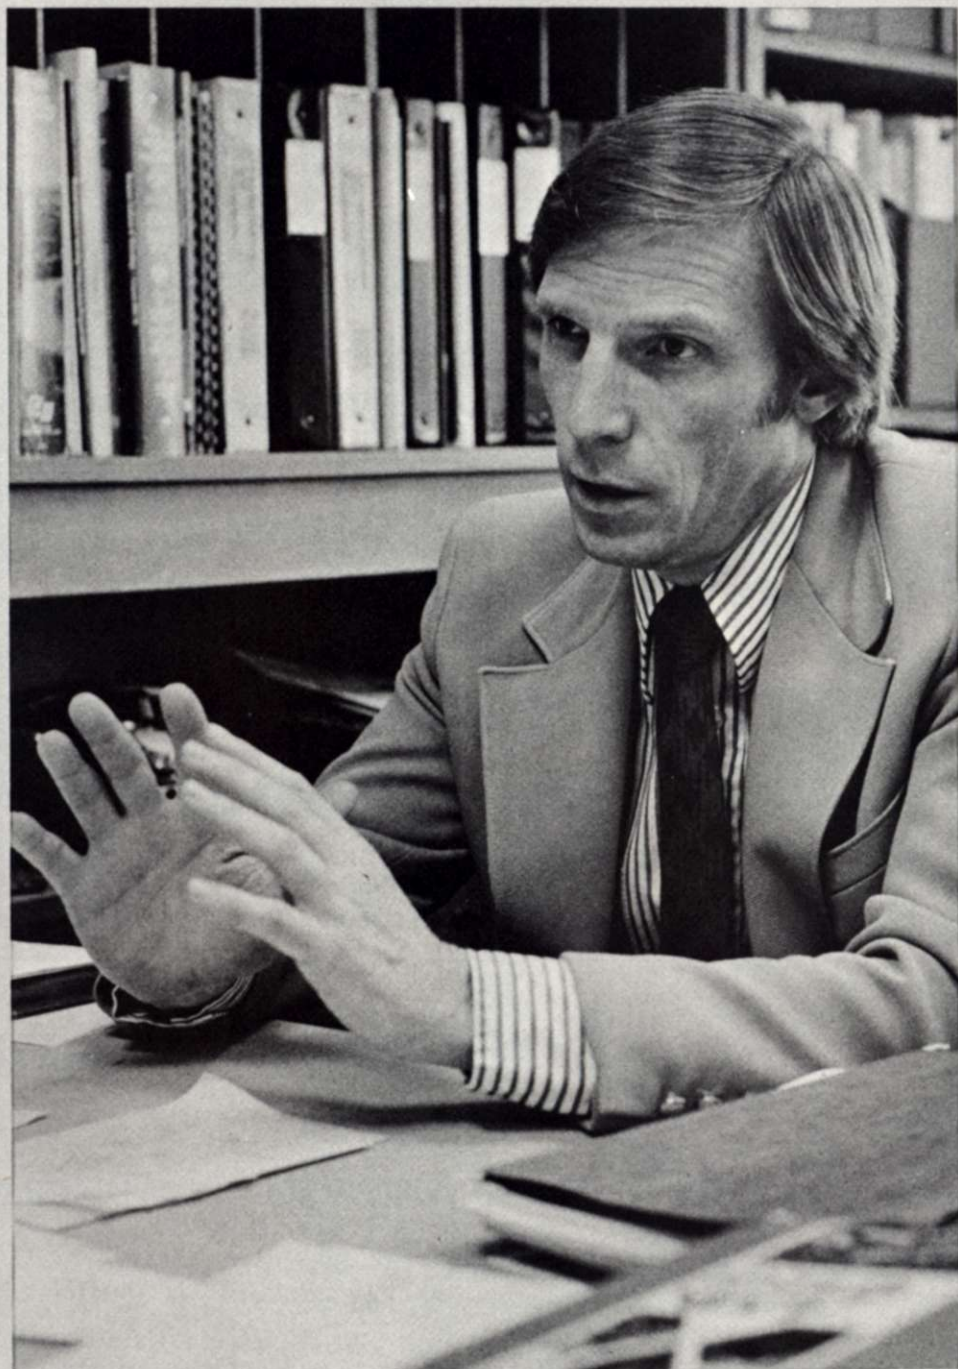

Clockwise from top left, opposite page: Mr. Larry Koskinen, director of the ever popular and highly successful Talisman Film Festival, was awarded the Davis Leadership Award for outstanding service to the RIT community. Mr. Mike Loftus was reelected president of RHA. Mr. Loftus ran unopposed.

Dr. Fred Smith was vice president for Student Affairs. An unidentified child enjoys an American Cancer Society benefit lollipop sale sponsored by RIT's Greek community.

Deb Hartzfeld and Doug Cartwright were elected vice president and president of Student Association in the first uncontested election in many years. Mr. Jon Prime, in his first year as vice president for Finance and Administration, worried much about Kodak's declining stock prices as he managed RIT's $65 million endowment.

A Turbulent Year

Dr. Fred Smith spent a turbulent year as vice president for Student Affairs. He announced the decision to drop Varsity Football, a decision which, according to many, he was not in favor of. The Techmila Survey on Sexual Attitudes was censored by Smith, leaving two pages in this year's yearbook blank. According to Smith, the "Survey" was, more accurately, a description of one man's sex life. A vivid description at that.

On the brighter side for Dr. Smith, was the Institutional emphasis on the Quality of Student Life, a favored topic of his. Another Smith brainchild, Complimentary Education, is receiving greater attention.

Pleasing The Crowds?

From the jazz violin of Jean Luc Ponty to the arduous 24 hour James Bond Film Marathon the College Activities Board has presented a total spectrum of events for its audiences' entertainment. But the response to the CAB events has been as varied as the events themselves. Many of the events have been disastrous for the financially troubled group—often selling to less than 50 percent of capacity. The effect of this may be a new outlook on programming for the RIT community. More smaller events may be the word for next year. For big concerts the RIT student will generally have to look elsewhere—as with the Genesis concert at the War Memorial.

A Mixed Year For Sports

Hysterically happy, RIT's Basketball team tears down the net after sweeping the Lincoln First Tournament. RIT defeated Hobart in the final contest, 67-56. It was the second year in a row the Tigers found victory at the Lincoln Tourney.

Elsewhere, however, there was less elation...

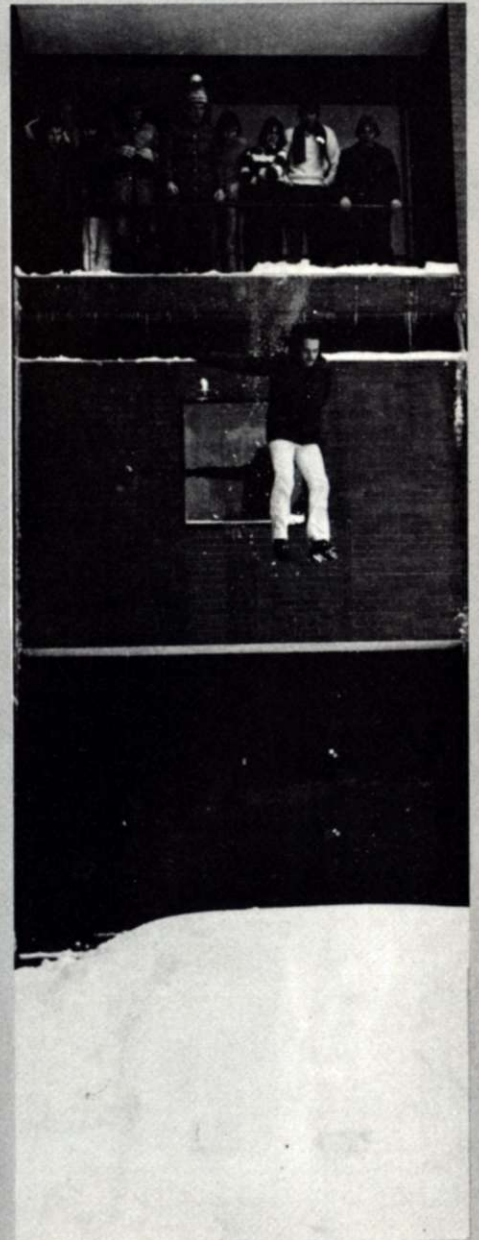

RIT was certainly not in the running for the winningest college in sports, but they racked up points in the inconsistent category.

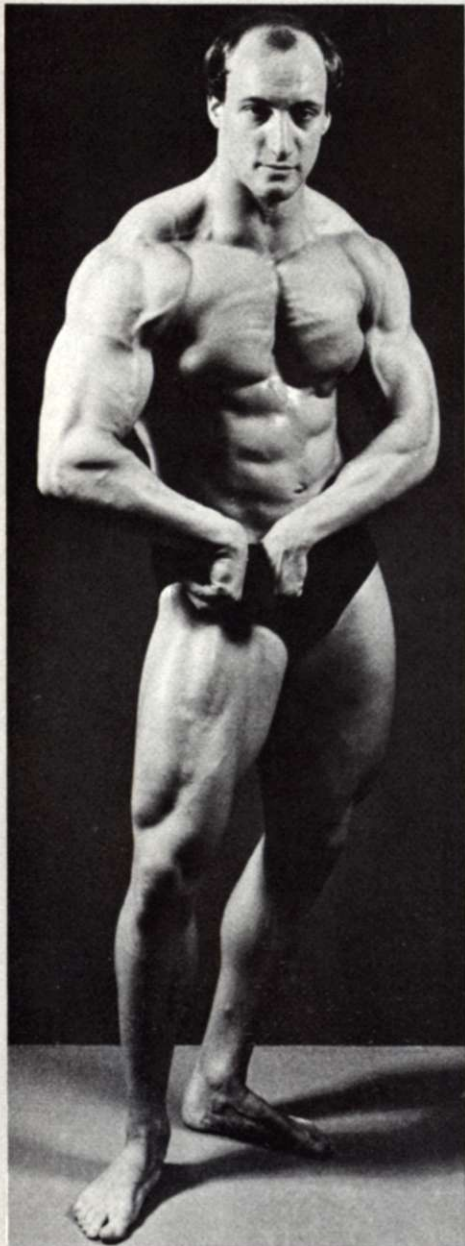

After a particularly distressful season, Football was dropped from the roster. The money for that sport would stay in the Athletic Department's budget, we were told, but somehow that didn't seem to make up the difference for those athletes who were disenfranchised.

The Yankees won the series hundreds of miles away, but the celebration went on here just the same. The NRH quad was papered with the enthusiasm of hundreds of Yankee fans on that momentous night in October.

Hockey, Lacrosse, Tennis, Soccer, Wrestling, Track—all that and more made up a year of Sports at RIT. For those with outside interests, The Watkins Glen Grand Prix was just a few miles away, and Student Travel Organization provided a charter to play the ponies at Batavia.

Fire!

As Area Complex Director Weas and an RA look on in horror, the Colby D dormitory is engulfed in the second fire of the year. The fire, which started in room 2010, was one of the worst RIT has experienced. Students later claimed that marijuana plants and other valuables were taken from their rooms when fire-fighters and Protective Services officers entered while fighting the fire.

Going The Way Of Fire, Or Ice ?

In terms of human life and property, 1977-1978 has truly been a disastrous year for RIT. Two dormitory fires, two suicides, and two accidental deaths—one while playing Broom Hockey and one while skin diving—have marred the usually peaceful RIT life. In addition, the winter was among the worst in recorded history, closing school a record number of times.

Digging out became a familiar, if not altogether pleasant, activity. Braving the storm was an art you learned quickly, without it Winter quarter would have been a total loss.

For the farmer, the problems were of a different nature. Inundated by unseasonably heavy rains, the farmer lost much of his crop. Unable to get into the fields to harvest, much of the produce rotted in the fields, causing high prices for farm products locally.

Fire was the most visible disaster for the year at RIT. Twice flames attacked the dormitory side of campus, once in NTID and once in Colby. Both were determined to be of accidental origin, and neither caused serious injury or death.

The year brought back one haunting question, however: Will the world end in fire, or under 180 inches of snow?
