ISN'T IT NICE WHEN THE EXPERTS DISCOVER SOMETHING YOU'VE KNOWN ALL ALONG.

ver 1.6 million people in education and research know that choosing TIAA-CREF was a smart move. And now everyone else does too. Because Morningstar-one of the nation's leading sources of variable annuity and mutual fund information-has some stellar things to say about our retirement investment accounts.

"This comfortable combination of risk and return has earned the CREF Stock Account a five-star rating."

After studying CREF's performance history, Morningstar gave five-stars-its highest ratingto both the CREF Stock and Bond Market Accounts, and an impressive four-stars to the CREF Social Choice Account In fact, the CREF Stock Account was singled out as having "...one of the best 10-year records among variable annuities." Of course, past performance is no guarantee of future results.

"...CREF is far and away the cheapest variable annuity out there.

Morningstar also called attention to CREF's "...rock-bottom" fees-something that can really add to the size of your nest-egg down the road.

What's more, TIAA's traditional annuitywhich offers guaranteed principal and interest plus the opportunity for dividends-was cited as having the highest fixed account interest rate among all annuities in its class.

We're happy to accept Morningstar's glowing ratings. But nice as it is to focus on stars, we'll keep focusing on something more down-to-earth: building the financial future you want and deserve.

Silent Service

The March 18 issue of REPORTER examined the conflict over the US military's 'Don't Ask, Don't Tell' policy. Student Government and the RIT Faculty Council proposed that RIT notify the US Department of Defense that the ROTC's exclusion of homosexuals directly violates RIT's hiring and admissions policies. It was also proposed that the Department of Defense and all ROTC programs at RIT should change their policies within five years or face suspension. The ROTC and the College of Applied Technology opposed the suspension.

In this year's September 30 issue, we received a letter from an RIT student whose main concern was the money the ROTC program brings to campus. I certainly sympathize with the problems of affording an education, but I cannot see this as justification for discrimination on campus.

Last week's Gannet Lecture was delivered by Colonel Margarethe Cammermeyer. I strongly suggest that those who may have missed it, view the tape available in the library media center. Until hearing her lecture 'Serving In Silence,' I saw the dispute based solely on the hypocrisy it created within the RIT policies and practices. However, after listening to Colonel Cammermeyer describe her 23 years of exemplary military service and her eventual discharge based on her admitted sexual orientation/preference, I do not see how the military can continue to adhere to this policy. Money is not the issue. The issue is the lives of men and women who want to serve their country; a country that discriminates.

Ticked By Tab Ads

I am writing in response to the two tab ads which ran in the Sept. 23 REPORTER. Both were filled with misdirection. They appeared to be an attack as a direct result of personal antipathy for a member of Student Government.

The first asks the reader what they think of "Student Government spending $2000 on a private party?" This "private party" that they are referring to was the Student Government Retreat. The members of the Student Government Senate and Cabinet gave up their weekends to work on and plan out our goals for the year. Only sixteen members were able to attend, but a great deal of work was accomplished. A well-written article in that same issue was devoted to the results of that retreat. Yes, we enjoyed ourselves, but the Lion's share of that weekend was devoted to working on student issues. And, it was a $2100 affair, $900 under budget.

The second ad once again asked the reader to develop an opinion from yet another inaccurate presentation of facts. The "multi-thousand dollar Mac Powerbook" was $1200, and was an actual savings from the desktop Mac that was being considered. The desktop model would have run around $3000. The capabilities of the Powerbook are comparable to those of the desktop model, if not greater. At the same time, another Powerbook was also purchased for the Club Coordinator, instead of a desktop model, also saving money there.

It disgusts me that I feel I must answer such a cowardly, anonymous attack on continued on page 29

Attrition comes to RIT

Attrition.

The final frontier.

These are the voyages of the starship RIT.

Whose 10 year strategic plan is to seek out and explore new areas of academic excellence...

That is the hype, but what is attrition? Some form of dietary malfunction?

No, but it could cause a few upset stomachs among RIT staff and faculty.

President Albert Simone went straight to business during the October 14 conference in Ingle Auditorium. The open forum lecture was held in order to familiarize faculty, staff and students with new budget changes as a result of the Strategic Plan.

According to Webster's Dictionary, attrition is defined as the slow wearing down of resources. Simone insists that resources will not diminish, only grow stronger.

"RIT is not in a crisis... in fact, it's just the reverse," the president said.

It has taken close to two years to concoct the Strategic Plan. Simone's prescription for managed attrition will assure enough finances to carry out that plan.

"We're acting for the long run," Simone said.

RIT has an endowment of $250 million, proving the institution's solid backing. This contingency funding enables stability even when enrollment is down.

In order to compete with other top ranked schools, better incentives must be offered to the professors as well as departments. The finance committee of the Board of Trustees has approved a 5.1% salary increase over the span of five years in order to make faculty/staff earnings up to par with other institutions. This does not mean all staff will have a 5.1% increase. Each college will be responsible to distribute the pay raises.

Simone would also like to see a stop in tuition hikes. Under the dictates of the plan, up to 20% of vacant faculty or staff positions will be refilled. There will be a near absolute freeze on hiring new staff. In addition, a program review board may be created to decide what programs need more money as well as which can be phased out or merged.

This means a number of things to students: reduced class offerings, less schedule flexibility, and possibly a higher faculty/student ratio in currently small classes.

For faculty, it means they may find themselves adapting to new positions and program structures. Promotions will still be possible(sometimes necessary) as well as sabbaticals and leaves of absence. Simone states no layoffs will occur for the next 2 to 3 years.

A few gray areas such as visiting faculty, split appointments and positions funded by grants still exist.

According to William Dempsey, vice president of finances and administration, 350 people are expected to leave the institute due to retirement or other status between 1996-97. This projection is based on the turnover rates for 1993 of which custodial staff was the highest. Under the new guidelines only 50 of those leaving would be replaced.

The emphasis of the Strategic Plan is "seamlessness"; a streamline university environment. A lower level of bureaucracy will be required to run a tight ship. There are "too many managers."

One advantage of this is that students will have access to courses outside their major. "Our intent is not to denigrate programs," Simone said.

The relatively poor turnout of students at the forum indicates a breakdown in communication to the general populace of RIT. The Strategic Plan and Action for Agenda VAX conferences are still available and will soon be updated. Copies of the Strategic plan are also available from Student Government and President Simone's office. Alfred Penn

Calling All Students

At last! Meetings have been held between RCI—-the long distance telecommunications carrier contracted by RIT to service the apartments, Rochester Telephone, and the student subscribers who occupy the apartments.

Representatives from RCI fielded questions from a handful of students about billing, service, communication and other problems associated with RIT's telecommunications.

Among the chief complaints were RCI's billing foul-ups, which may have involved incorrect formulas being used to compute overseas phone bills, producing overcharges generated by elongating RCI's billing periods on those overseas calls.

On these calls, RCI bills in six second increments, or a billing "period". One student, however, who had a telephone that displayed his on-line time, hung up in the middle of a billing period, and found to his dismay that he had been billed for the full minute instead. An RCI representative promised to look into the matter, but had no explanation of what may have been happened.

Another potentially troubling matter was the problem of crank phone calls. With the old system, caller I.D. was used. This is a feature where a telephone I.D. signal is sent with the caller's number to a box that is hooked up to the recipient's telephone allowing the customer to identify the number from which the call originated. Unfortunately this system is not yet offered to RCI customers here due to what Derek Shoemaker from Rochester Telephone categorized as " a billing problem".

There were many other complaints, which indicate that RIT telecommunications and RCI need to work the bugs out of the system. Nevertheless, the fact that there was a team here that seemed concerned and eager to correct these problems is cause for optimism, and there was a call to establish focus groups to determine future needs. Still, the proof is in the pudding. —Alan David Dias

It's Only a Game

The 10th Anniversary Rudicon Convention of the Wargamers Association and Guild is going to be held October 21-23.

The convention will consist of role-playing board and card game tournaments. There will be prizes ranging from $150 on down. The expected turnout is around 500 "gamers". This year's Rudicon is sponsored by the Rochester Wargamer Association and Guild and RIT Student Government.

The Wargamers Association at RIT is a loosely-organized club that meets once a week to play different role-playing board games. Headed by Peter Leuger, they get together Tuesdays from 7 to 11 pm in the cafeteria of the Student Alumni Building.

Vice President James Barry calls the annual Rudicon convention "a Renaissance-type fair with a gaming twist." There will be people selling armor, T-shirts and many other things. The Alumni building cafeteria will be set aside for vendors during Rudicon, RIT students get in the vendor area free with ID. Crazy Eagor's and Adventures in Hobbies are two of the hobby shops that will be represented at the convention. —Willis White

Pumping Iron

Holy bulging biceps, Batman! Results are in!

The 26th annual Natural Empire Physique Competition rocked the Rochester Riverside Convention Center Saturday, October 15. Sponsored in part by Twinlab® the event was hosted by Jim Rockell, promoter and owner of PowerHouse Gym. 39 men and 19 women duked it out for the title of most physically fit. Ages ranged from 16 to 58 years old in the categories of teenage(males), light, medium and heavy weight masters. Contestants poured on the tanning oil and put on their Sunday best (or least) for the audience. Music blared as the participants posed, danced and strutted their stuff before the panel of 19 judges and a raving audience. RIT's own Darlene Wilcox, second year printing major, won sixth place in the women's heavy weight division; the youngest contestant at age 19. Proud parents and brother cheered as Wilcox performed her flawless routine to the earthshaking sounds of Queen. Long weeks of work finally paid off and the results were impressive.

TeaTime!

Following family tradition is one thing, but being the eleventh generation to do so shows a strong commitment. This is the case with Toshio Ohi, a Japanese ceramist who creates ceremonial teaware, as his family has done since the early seventeenth century.

In a lecture given on Wednesday, October 5th, in the College of Imaging Science, Toshio enlightened a large audience with slides of his unique ceramic pieces. He also provided a history of Ohiyaki ware, the form of teaware which is his family's specialty.

Toshio was born in 1958 in Kanazawa, Japan. He was educated at Boston University, receiving his M.F.A. as well as receiving a B.A. from Tamagawa University in Tokyo. In 1989, Toshio studied at Rochester Institute of Technology, and returned as a guest lecturer in 1993. He has had several exhibitions as well as pieces included in various architecture and on permanent display. The work that Toshio Ohi showed at his lecture was from his Shogan (First Supidity — it's making a comeback in the film industry, from Jim Carrey's lamebrained but admittedly funny antics in Ace Ventura: Pet Detective to the questionable sanity of whoever green-lighted The Little Rascals. But not many other recent releases can boast the full-tilt, whackedout ridiculousness of Sylvester Stallone's new explosion-fest The Specialist. Stallone has rarely ever been associated with brainy cinema, but his latest offering sports plot holes the size of moon craters and less intelligence than a sack of egplants.

Stallone plays an ex-CIA explosives expert named Ray Quick who works as a soldier-of-fortune for those in need — in this instance, an embittered woman (Sharon Stone) eager to wipe out the Miamibased Mafia hoods who murdered her parents. But, wouldn't you know it, a fellow CIA operative (a wonderfully hyperactive James Woods) who double-crossed Quick years ago is now working for the same mob don who is targeted for elimination, setting the stage for a confusing, violent showdown-ofsorts. And yes, Stallone and Stone also somehow find the time to pencil in a sweaty rendezvous or two.

There's no conceivable reason why The Specialist should serve as anything more than a barely-watchable excuse for a nap, but it's actually fairly entertaining in a campy, extremely lowbrow kind of way. Most of the credit belongs to Peruvian director Luis Llosa (Sniper), who gives the film's Miami setting a colorful, exotic look and stages the massive carnage with a true sense of awe and grandeur.

However, keep in mind that the other reason The Specialist is so entertaining is Sylvester Stallone's unusual performance, which walks a dangerous line between subtlety and self-parody. It's admirable to see him try to play a more sensitive variety of killing machine, but his character is such a sensitive guy that he rivals Alan Alda for tender cuddliness. He drinks "ice" beer, adopts a stray cat and practices t'ai-chi — yet he's not above cracking peoples' spines when they refuse to give up their bus seats to pregnant women. It's difficult to root for such a squishy hero, but it's quite easy to chuckle at one — especially one who looks so awkward and uncomfortable during his gratuitous "love scenes" with contemporary cinema's foremost sex-bomb. But Stallone seems game even if he looks silly, and he's buffered by two fun performances by the always-intense Woods and the always-leggy Stone.

BARRY OLIVER

Stupid is as stupid does, and this film is, in a proverbial sense, certainly no rocket scientist. But for action-movie fans tirelessly counting the days until the release of Pulp Fiction, The Specialist is a satisfactory appetizer that, while full of empty calories, will at least sit well in your stomach. Ween-ie Roast with Chocolate and Cheese

It's nice to learn that Ween has finally put out a new album, Chocolate and Cheese, for a variety of reasons. One on hand, it's great to hear some of the band's new material after the two years since their last excursion into musical depravity, the patently dorky and now-infamous Pure Guava, was unleashed upon an unsuspecting public. But on the other hand, the release of Chocolate and Cheese is also heartening because it means that Ween has been lucky enough to make it through those two long years without killing themselves or getting thrown in jail.

For those of you unfamiliar with the Ween experience, I'll try and give you a history of this totally unique group. Formed in junior high school by "brothers" Dean and Gene Ween, the band has existed in one form or another for many years, mostly surviving on meals they've asked fans to bring to their concerts. After two releases on the small (and now-defunct) indie-label Twin/Tone, the brothers — who advocate getting high on house-hold cleaning-products and still openly admit to dealing drugs — were signed, during unknown circumstances, to Elektra Records. They released their first major-label album, Pure Guava, days after they were evicted from their house. A demented collection of funky drum-machine beats, distorted vocals and songs with titles like "Hey Fat Boy (Asshole)," the album was a hit with college radio stations but later turned into a runaway best-seller when their obnoxious video for "Push th' Little Daisies" was lucky enough to appear on — you guessed it — MTV's Beavis and Butt-head. Cue instant cult-notoriety.

But now that the band has finally released a new recording, the inevitable question emerges: can Ween actually top the sick genius of Pure Guava? Well, they haven't yet, but there's still plenty to like about Chocolate and Cheese; if this release is any indication, time hasn't dulled the brothers' warped sense of humor. They made a name for themselves with their flamboyant bad-taste, and listening to new tunes such as "The HIV Song" will leave little doubt in most fans' minds that Ween remains the reigning king of musical abhorrence.

Equally integral to Ween's success, however, is their minimalist, absolutely-ridiculousbut-very-distinct sound. From the whiny refrain of "Spinal Meningitis (Got Me Down)," ("I'm feelin' greasy, mommy / Please don't let me die"), to the infectiously bouncy rhythm of "Take Me Away," Ween still plays with the goofy verve that has inspired such other "slacker-rock" favorites as Beck. And even though the major-label production values of

Cheese are light years

ahead of the clunky, four-track recordings

we've come to expect from the band in the past, it's still a wonderfully tacky and — gasp! — even credible release that's bound to delight both long-time fans and those who are still uninitiated to the deranged wit of Ween. — Josh Slates

Sport Notes

Last weeks Athletes of the Week were Tony Fraij (Cross Country) and Allison St. Amand (Women's Soccer). Fraij placed first in Notre Dame the Invitational, and St. Amand played two outstanding games as RIT traveled up North to take on Lawrence and Clarkson St. University and post their first victory

Sean Spencer, men's soccer, is currently the fourth leading scorer in the EAA with nine goals and an assist. Teammate Matt Ledges leads the league in goaltending.

Amy Luther (6 points), Julie Sterling(4), and Megan Kuryla(4) lead the women's soccer teams in scoring.

The men's hockey team starts off their season in just two weeks as they travel to take on Fredonia State College on Sat., 10/29. Road Trip!!!

Upcoming Events

Men's Soccer vs. Alfred	(10/22, 2PM)

Ties for EAA Championship

This past weekend, the RIT Harriers competed in the Empire Athletic Association (EAA) Championship at Saratoga State Park. The Tigers claimed their ninth championship since 1991 tying with St. Lawrence University, each scoring 41 points.

Sophomore Tony Fraij took second place behind St. Lawrence's Jeff Lyndaker with a time of 25:54. Teammates Jamie Glydon (25:57) and Brian Adams (26:06) followed close-ly behind to take 3rd and 4th place.

This is the first tie in the EAA Cross Country Championship since it began in 1968. St. Lawrence currently holds 10 of the past championships, and RIT holds nine. Congratulations Tigers!!!

On the Winning Stream

This past weekend, the women's soccer team traveled out east to take on Rensselaer Polytech Institute (RPI) and Hartwick College. RIT went 1-0-1 for the weekend, tying RPI 1-1 and posting a 2-0 win over the Hartwick Warriors.

Taking on the RPI Engineers on their turf, the Lady Tiger fired it up at the start, moving the ball around smoothly. With less than 10 minutes to go in the first half, Junior Becky O'Brien fought to gain possession of a loose ball and sent it through to Megan Kuryla. Kuryla turned and placed a sweet shot in the far corner, deflecting it off the post into the back of the net, untouchable for any goaltender. Unfortunately, RPI was able to tie it up early in the second half. Although the Lady Tigers outshot the Engineers, they could not complete on the win.

RIT continued their plight the next day facing the Hartwick Warriors. Stepping it up a notch, the Lady Tigers beat their opponent to the ball aggressively. Early in the first half, RIT worked the ball upfield and Brena Gilbert deflected it off a Warrior defender to draw the cornerkick. Freshman Julie Sterling sent a strong ball over the top. Hartwick was able

Looking for the Win

The RIT volleyball team faced another tough weekend, going 1-3 in the RIT Volleyball Invitational held in the Clark Gymnasium. The Lady Tigers started strong, defeating crosstown rivals University of Rochester, but fell to Thomas More, St. Olaf, and Hope University in later matches.

Against UR, Freshman Cheryl Durst completed on 45 assists and Michelle Jarzyniecki had 19 digs to gain the 3-1 victory. Other highlights for the weekend were Lucy Emberg with 16 kills against Thomas More and Durst added 24 assists in the 3-0 loss. RIT fell to St. Olaf and Hope 3-0. Durst was named to the All-Tournament team for the Tigers.

RIT will travel out east to Long Island to compete in the Tourney of Champions at Stony Brook University this weekend and look towards a strong finish. Good Luck Tigers!!! to head it out but fellow RIT freshman Nikki Lewis was right on it, sending it across the net. Sophomore Amy Luther stepped up to place the first and winning goal, giving RIT a 1-0 lead. The Lady Tigers were not finished. Coach Abby Steele was able to mix it up and send in some fresh legs. RIT dominated, coming strong to the ball, drawing yet another cornerkick. Lewis sent one along the six-yard line and in a scramble in front of the net, Kuryla and Luther were able to make it a 2-0 game.

It was a true team effort as RIT improved their record to 3-8-2. Forwards Marie Signor, Gilbert, and Katrin Pakenis played tough combining with freshman Michelle Campbell's crosses over the top and O'Brien's hustle to highlight the match. Sue Traynor and Robin Kennick played with total denial on defense. Goaltenders, Jen Muller and Alli St. Amand, combined for 13 saves. The Lady Tigers play their final match of the year this Saturday at 4:00PM versus Elmira College. Good Luck Ladies!!!

A Season of Success

This past week the women's tennis squad ended their regular season with a record of 7-3, defeating Buffalo State and Wells College. Last weekend, they competed in the St. John Fisher Cardinal Invitational where Kirsten Fredrickson paired up with Mary Prescott to win the second flight doubles title. The two are currently 10-0 in doubles competition.

In the Buffalo State victory, the Lady Tigers took seven out of the nine matches. Wins came from Kate Ochal (6-3, 6-3), Patty West (6-1, 6-2), Kelli Ragin (6-0, 7-5), Fredrickson (6-2, 6-2), and a sweep by Elena Loya (6-0, 6-0). In doubles action, Ochal combined with Michelle Danzer to defeat their opponent in two sets 6-3, 6-4 to improve their record to 7-5. Fredrickson and Prescott posted their ninth victory with a 6-1, 6-1 match.

Against Wells, RIT portrayed total denial, disallowing their opponent a match and defeating them 9-0. Fredrickson rejected any requests for a point, winning 6-0, 6-0. West and Loya followed suit, defeating their opponents 6-0, 6-0 in doubles action.

The Lady Tigers will compete in the New York State Women's Collegiate Athletic Association (NYSWCAA) Championship this weekend. Good Luck Ladies!!!

Take No Prisoners

A free piece of advice for teams playing the RIT Tigers men's soccer team: hide the women and children because what is going to happen will not be pretty. For the fourth game in a row, an opponent stepped on the field with the Tigers and had their hats handed to them. Last Wednesday, it was Union's turn to visit the RIT soccer field and watch the Tigers run around, by, and over them as the #7 ranked Tigers improved their record to 8-1-1.

The RIT offense, sparked by passes from Vic Cheechov to set up the first two scores, pummeled the Union defense for a total of six. The lone first half goal came in the 24th minute when Sean Spencer received a pass form Cheechov about 25 yards from the Union goal. Spencer dribbled through about six Union defenders and stroked a shot from 16 yards out to give RIT a 1-0 advantage.

In the second half, things picked up and the Tigers scored more than Sam Malone. In the 52nd minute, Cheechov hit a long cross which tipped off the goalie's gloves, ricocheted off the crossbar, and was headed in by Charlie Stead to start the second half deluge. A minute and a half later, Stead led John Im with a sweet pass in the Union penalty box, which Im put by the keeper for a 3-0 lead. The fourth goal came when Sean Spencer headed home a John Im cornerkick in the 64th minute. John DiMiceli stripped a Union defender of the ball, and blasted the ball past the Union goalie from 20 yards out for the fifth Tiger goal. At that point, Union briefly rallied and managed to do something that not many teams have done this year against the Tigers. They scored a goal in the 79th minute against RIT goalie Kirk Johnson to deny the Tigers a fourth straight shutout. But the Tiger offense continued to roar as George Barakos capped off the scoring in the 6-1 blowout when he was successful on a penalty kick in the 82nd minute.

The Tigers finish out the season with home games against Alfred on Saturday and Geneseo next Wednesday. Keep rolling, Tigers!-Don Lecker

ATHLETES OF THE WEEK

Kirsten Fredrickson

Kirsten Fredrickson, a junior from Manlius NY, has been named Female Athlete of the Week. Fredrickson, along with partner Mary Prescott, won the second flight doubles title at the St. John Fisher Cardinal Invitational women's tennis tournament.

"She's a highly motivated athlete," said coach Ann Nealon. "She played 14 hours of tennis in two days and played the last match like it was her first. She competes with a passion and makes her opponent work for every point."

Sean Spencer

Sean Spencer, a sophomore from St. Louis, MO, has been named Male Athlete of the Week for RIT and by the Empire Athletic Association and Rochester Area College Athletics for the second time in three weeks. Spencer scored both goals in the first half in the RIT men's soccer team's 2-0 win over Nazareth Saturday and also had a goal in a 2-0 win over Fredonia. Two of Spencer's goals were head shots.

"Sean has shown a knack for scoring goals," said Doug May. "He can score several different ways as he has proven - with the head or the feet at the right place at the right time and off different services."

Charlie Horst is one of those lucky few who has a job he truly enjoys.

For the past fifteen years this police veteran of 27 years has been working as a mounted officer for the Rochester police department. His beat, the downtown section where there is an influx of over 40,000 people working each day.

"I truly love this work. To me, it's more like a hobby," says Charlie.

Charlie has had a fondness for horses since childhood. Raised on a farm, Charlie was too young to remember his first encounter with a horse.

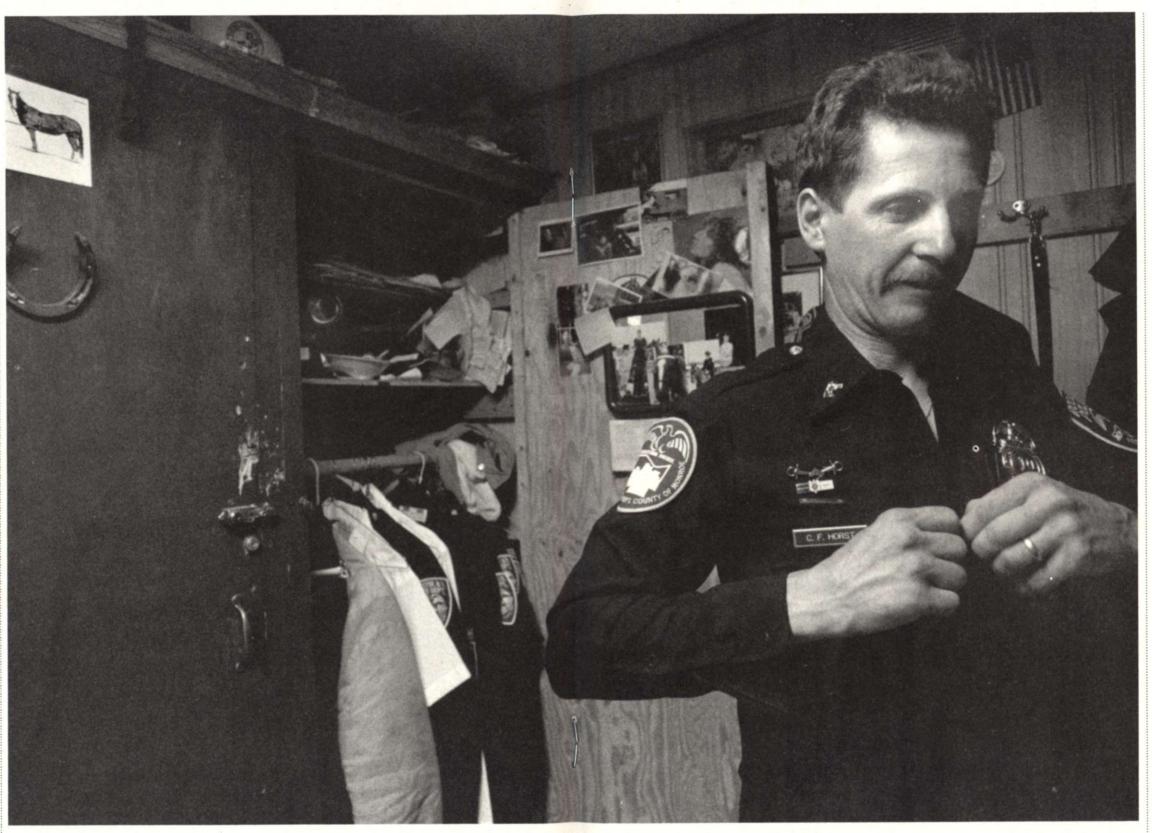

Across the nation, over 75 cities are returning to the mounted force that was once ever so popular from the eighteen hundreds to the nineteen twenties. According to Captain Ray Moser, the mounted patrol's department head, the mounted patrol has more than just tactical value: "Their public relations value is incredible. The horses are a sort of magnet to the public," says Moser. "People of all ages, sexes and races like horses. No one wants to pet a cop, but they love to pet a horse!"

According to Moser, the horses help break down the negative image that the public might have of police and help open a dialogue with the community.

"The mounted unit is the only real device the department has which can effectively and constantly do this," remarks Moser.

Though a valuable public relations tool, their tactical value can not be understated. "Since the unit was re-established, street crimes like harassment, muggings, panhandlers, drinking in public, and civil disorder have diminished," says Moser. "The key seems to be their high visibility."

According to Moser, a officer on a horse can see for well over a block. By raising the public's awareness through their sheer presence, civilians feel safer and potential criminals more leery.

One of their most effective uses is controlling or diverting a crowd. "When a mounted unit needs to move a crowd, people seem to be a little more reasonable if a 1500 lb. horse is moving them," comments Charlie. "In a rowdy situation, very few people are interested in attacking an officer on horseback than an officer on foot."

"What makes this job great is the people I work with and the style of the job," says Charlie. "Where else can I work with a tight knit group of people, perform police work and be with horses?"

Charlie and his newest partner, Shilo, have been together for almost the past five years. Shilo joined the department after being rejected by three prior owners on the grounds of being too temperamental to ride.

Like half of the horses in the unit, Shilo was donated. But unlike any other of the horses, Shilo has been considered a lost cause by his previous owners, including the Monroe Police Department (RPD).

Since Charlie had just retired his first partner, "Champ," and Shilo was about to be released from the RPD, Charlie asked for a shot with Shilo.

At first, it was a rocky ride: "I couldn't ride him five blocks without him having a panic attack or child-like temper tantrum. He just wouldn't stand still anywhere." Each officer is responsible for training their new partner.

According to Charlie, perfectionism is the key. "There's always something we can work to improve. In the past five years, Shilo has gone from a skittish rookie to a partner that trusts me enough to be willing to go into an elevator, climb stairs, stand in traffic and walk through a crowd," says Charlie. "He'll do anything I ask!"

Charlie says he really enjoys being a member of this unique team, and would retire before going back onto the regular beat.

Although Charlie was eligible for retirement two years ago, Charlie says that he has no intentions of hanging up his spurs in the near future. "I'm enjoying myself too much to want to retire any time soon." \blacklozenge

THE FUTURE OF COMPUTER SCIENCE UdssackArds

BY RAHUL MERWAH . PHOTOGRAPHS BY KURT BROWNELL

"It's different from what I expected"

"I'm lost ... there are just too many loose ends around here." "The support is insufficient I can't understand the books" "They don't seem to have clear objectives"

These are all thoughts expressed by students regarding the new Computer Science curriculum. If you thought technology was already at the cutting edge, then we have more news for you. Over most of last year, the Computer Science Curriculum Committee has been working on new courseware for the lower-level undergraduate curriculum, and this quarter we see the first implementations of this project.

Although initially the department was wary of discussing the topic, they ultimately opened up and gave a wealth of information. Professor Warren Carithers, Undergraduate Computer Science Program Coordinator, explained that it was collectively decided that object-oriented programming was going to be the way of the future, and the department wanted to be on the "cutting edge" of technology for a change.

In object-oriented programming (OOP for short), objects are individual units that have a certain relationship with each other. It is not necessary for a programmer to know what is in each object, only how the objects interact.

This method of "hiding" information from the user is called data abstraction.

Procedural programming is commonly learned at the high school level or earlier. It involves giving the computer line by line instructions in order to carry out specific tasks. In this case the programmer must know exactly what is in the code in order to make it interact properly with other programs or modules as they are also called.

OOP reduces time on large scale application development, because other programmers can easily understand how objects are related. It also promotes code recycling. For all of us programmers out there, rewriting a general program when we could have reused tested functions is probably the biggest single waste of time. The new technology is supposed to make the understanding of programming objects stronger by removing the nitty-gritty of the implementation while still ingraining the concept of abstraction on the student's mind.

Professor Margaret Reek, Chairperson of the First Two Year Curriculum Committee and Course

Coordinator of Computer Science I (the only course brought into effect this quarter) pointed out that the other major influence on the curriculum was the emergence of Software Engineering as a major discipline. As the modifications proposal dated October 12, 1994 says, "We intend to develop the theme that software is created and tested using sound practices and proven techniques, not simply through 'seat of the pants' programming."

According to Professor Reek, the faculty had found that the concepts of data abstraction were not getting through to the students. The timing of this change is crucial - the Computer Science Accreditation Board is due to reevaluate RIT's curriculum in 1995 according to its new standards, including software engineering concepts and the concept of 'social programming.' Social programming is a method of making computer professionals more aware of the social and ethical implications of their work and how it directly and indirectly affects the people around them. These new standards, combined with dropping student enrollment and high student dropout rate, have made the success of the new changes very important for the Computer Science department.

According to the proposal, the new curriculum addresses these problems and potential future ones. The use of an object-oriented language would help students understand abstraction better. The new program is tree-like in structure and allows the students more choice in the selection of a sequence of courses rather than enforcing any particular one. The new course expects to have a strong foundation in software engineering and there is scheduled to be a lab-based Software Engineering course which will have a Professional Communication course as a prerequisite. This will allow the students to be in a surrounding that is a more realistic simulation of computer science jobs.

But the new program hasn't been without its share of controversy. First, on the choice of the language that the department selected: Eiffel. Eiffel is hailed by Bertrand Meyers, the owner of Eiffel Inc. and developer of the language, as a pure object-oriented language. While students more or less universally agree that object-oriented programming and object-oriented languages are the way of the future, quite a few students seem lost here in the present. Many of them added that studying an object-oriented at this level was a different and interesting concept and most of them commended the department's decision to change over to an object-oriented approach.

Professor Reek explains why the faculty had selected Eiffel: "It was essentially a decision between four object-oriented languages: C++, Eiffel, Modula-3 and SmallTalk. While C++ and Modula-3 allow mixed programming in both procedural and objects, Eiffel and SmallTalk are essentially purer object-oriented languages. The decision to use Eiffel stemmed from its purity in concepts and its availability and support." Students like Anath Kabra and Mohammed Malik feel that the books handed out for this course are "insufficient and occasionally vague." Brian Gallagher says, "I feel that I need more help with the syntax I would like to see it in a form at when I can just locate the syntax for a command ... kinda like an index." He adds, "Eiffel is like the old Apple Logo - it was fun to have it, but then you move on to more practical and useful things (like C++)."

Students like Jimmy Wong also point out that "The bulk of the students who decide to become computer science majors in college would have some procedural language experience." To that extent, almost all the students said that the professors made a great deal of effort to solve any problems that the students had with the class. All the students pointed out that their line of attack for a problem was that they would ask the students in the class. If the problem persisted then they would ask the professor. As Professor Carithers points out, "The faculty takes time out to ask the students if they have any problems but if the students themselves don't voice those problems, then the faculty can only assume that either they understand it all or that they don't care enough to ask." But the average student is very reluctant to be identified. Although many students were willing to share their opinions and feelings, they were at the same time, not willing to be directly quoted in this article. Margaret Reek rejoins, "We (the faculty) don't bite!... This is a new course and we are testing the courseware. We collect feedback for each lab and constantly revise the curriculum to make it more interesting and relevant."

Professor Reek informs us that the class attendance in the labs has gone up quite high as compared to the last few years, and more students are taking interest. The curriculum is a test for lots of other colleges too who are interested in the results of application of this program. Professor Reek informs us that this curriculum has already been presented in three seminars and papers are in the pipeline for a March conference. Apparently, there are a lot of people out there that want to see the results of this curriculum "experiment." +

What we do for YOU

Over the summer several changes were made to improve some of the services that are offered by Student Government. These changes are intended not only to improve the quality of the services offered by Student Government, but also to hopefully improve the numbers of students that utilize SG services. Services that are currently offered include: FREE van usage for SG recognized clubs and organizations, a Ride Board to help students in need of a ride home over break, and FREE legal aid for RIT students.

Student Government currently owns two 15 passenger vans. These vans can be signed out by any SG recognized club, or any of the 6 recognized major student organizations. Use of these vans is free (just have to pay for gas). Before this year, the Student Government vans were maintained and operated solely by the SG Secretary of Services. Due to class loads and other responsibilities, the Services Secretary was only able to check on the vans occasionally. This meant that the vans would often be abused (not filling the gas tank, leaving a mess, or damaging the van). This year, thanks to Gary Caton from Campus Safety, and Jeff Avrin the SG Secretary of Services, Campus Safety will check our vans everyday to make sure that they are filled with gas, clean, and not damaged. Campus Safety is providing this service to SG for FREE.

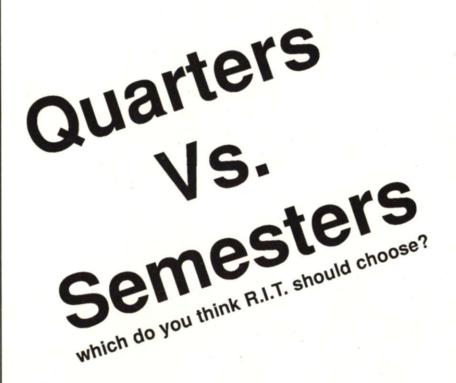

Currently, Student Government maintains a bulletin board in the Student Union (located in the hallway outside of the RITreat) for students looking to get a ride home at the end of the quarter. This year, Jeff Avrin has been working on mounting a new ride ride board inside of the RITreat. This board is much larger and utilizes actual cards that can be put into slots on the board. This system, along with the fact that the board is much more visible, will hopefully get more students to post notices that they can give rides. The board is being given to SG for free from the Ford Motor Co.. In return, SG will be posting Ford's ads on the new board.

Since the mid 70's, Student Government has been providing students with a free legal aid service. SG maintains a contract with the firm Phillips, Lytle, Hitchcock, Blaine, and Hubert. Every Tuesday and Thursday this firm sends Paul Vick to the Student Government office to administer legal advise to any RIT student that needs it.

If you would like to use any of these services, please give us a call at x2204.

Focus Groups planned regarding the use of the Ritskellar/RIT Game Room/former bowling alley area

We've heard your concerns about lack of student space, and we have the opportunity now to make changes in the Ritskellar/RIT Game Room/former bowling alley area. We want to make this an area that students can use, not only during the day, but in the evening as well.

This is why WE NEED YOUR INPUT!

We've set up several focus groups to include all RIT students. All meetings will take place in the Clark conference rooms (at the top of the stairs in the Union) unless otherwise specified. Please feel free to attend any of the following:

Student Government with a reply. The object of the attack is obvious. Not only is that person blatantly mentioned, but the reader is told to "call him and let him know." Student Government is not a dictatorship. It is a group of students who have an interest in making sure the student voice is heard, and care about what happens to the students and the Institute. It is sad that this person didn't stop to think of that when they decided to lash out against SG for personal reasons. I, among others, was offended at the misdirection of the tab ads, especially since I was among those "partygoers." I Invite this person to ask some questions and consider what they're saying next time before they decide to take Student Government to task. We are here for the students, even those who won't leave their name to their complaint.

Variable Rate Information	The annual percentage rate for purchases may vary each calendar quarter: We will calculate the vanable rate by adding 9.4% to the rate disclosed as the U.S. Prime Rate reported in the "Money Rates" table of The Wall Street Journal on the third Tuesday of March, June, September and December of each year. Because the annual percentage rate is variable, the current rate may not be in effect when your card is issued. The rate will not be lower than 12.9% or higher than 19.8%. However, if cardmembers fail to keep all their Citibank accounts in good standing, the rate will increase to 19.8% on the full purchase balance.
