

Several RIT students broke the 60-hour national record for playing Monopoly in a moving elevator last week when they started playing in the elevator in Nathaniel Rochester Hall at 8 a.m. Thursday. Teams at Stanford University and the University of California at Berkeley started playing at the same time. In deference to the energy crisis, the elevator moved only when transporting passengers from one floor to the other. The students played 100 hours.

New Alumni Programs Seek To Involve Grads In Current Life At RIT

Delmonte

"We're no longer relying on nostalgic feelings to keep alumni interested in RIT. We have to be aggressive in offering services to alumni and involving them in the current life of the Institute. The success of fund-raising efforts with alumni depends on positive contact with the Institute."

That's Chris Belle-Isle, director of Alumni Programs, talking about the philosophy behind the Alumni Development Group, a staff working group recently begun by the Office of Development. Under the leadership of John Bodwell, director of Annual Support and chairman of the group, Belle-Isle, Richard Delmonte, director of Central Placement Services, and David Jones, an assistant director of Admissions, are planning and implementing programs to increase contact between the Institute and alumni.

"The Alumni Development Group was constituted as a means of pulling together our resources and coming up with a comprehensive plan of action," said Bodwell. "We selected four offices that were most directly concerned with the whole marketing question." Bodwell pointed out that RIT's need to build a strong, supportive alumni constituency has been established as a high priority for the Development effort.

A pilot program is currently underway to develop a network of alumni area representatives in areas outside of Rochester. Area representatives will be related to the Admissions and Placement Programs in several ways: as professionals available to talk with high school students about careers in their respective fields and educational preparation for it; as links with the Admissions Office to notify them of qualified students in the area interested in RIT, and as resources for an RIT graduate coming into their area to help him get settled.

Energy Use Substantially Cut In Last Months, Physical Plant Says

Electricity, natural gas and gasoline consumption have been reduced substantially since Dr. Miller asked everyone at the Institute to cut down energy use in November, physical plant spokesmen said last week.

Energy Conservation Officer David Jordan said electricity consumption has been reduced 18 per cent; natural gas consumption 4 per cent; and gasoline use by campus vehicles 20 per cent.

Dr. Miller said the Institute's overall goal was to reduce energy consumption 10 per cent.

"The Physical Plant department has asked for - - and received - - cooperation, suggestions, and help in reducing energy use of all kinds," L. Thomas Hussey, director of Physical Plant, said last week.

He said most campus buildings have been surveyed so unused equipment or heating can be shut off when the building is not in use, and that a computerized thermostat control for the campus is now in use to control heat, ventilation, and exhaust systems on campus.

Other energy saving measures he said have been taken in include:

--street lighting on Lomb Memorial Drive has been discontinued except at intersections.

--space heating and domestic water temperatures have been reduced wherever possible.

--lighting levels have been reduced in classrooms, hallways, conference rooms, and offices.

--Water temperature in the swimming pool has been dropped.

--the Housing office has organized

Social Work Meet

Set At RIT March 31

Dr. James Dumpson, newly appointed head of New York City's Human Services Administration, will speak at the sixth annual New York State Conference on Social Work Education March 31 to April 1 at RIT.

Mr. Phillip Johnston, executive secretary of the New York State Board for Social Work, will preside over the meeting.

The conference, being sponsored jointly by the RIT department of Social Work and the Monroe Community College departments of Human Services, is being held at the Inn on the Campus, 175 Jefferson Road.

"It's designed to explore the relationship between the social work agency, the social work education, and the student in a social work program" Leonard A. Gravitz, director of RIT's department of Social Work, said.

"We want to identify and emphasize the concept of the agency field placement as part of the educational experience and find ways of coordinating the efforts of the agency field supervisor, the student, and the faculty member," he said.

The RIT Social Work program, which now enrolls 165 students, is one of the few in the nation to require students as part of their field-work experience, to work full-time in a social work agency during a portion of their undergraduate study.

"There are two kinds of knowledge needed to become a professional social worker," Gravitz said. "One is the knowledge of philosophy and theory that a student gets from books."

"But the second - - and the one this conference is about - - is the knowledge and awareness of self that a student gets from being placed out in an agency. There he must internalize both the theory and the skills and learn to apply them to the client."

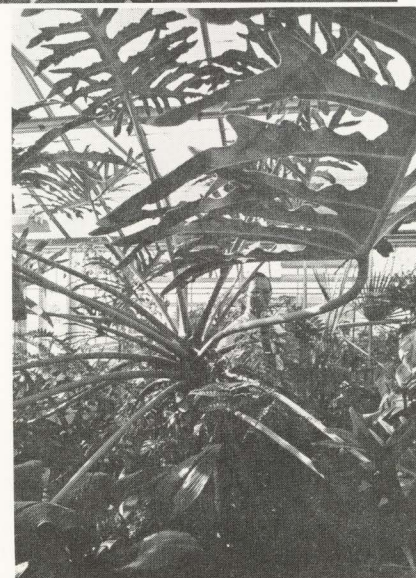

Dr. Dumpson, who will speak Sunday, March 31 at 7 p.m., is national president of the Council of Social Work Education and former dean of the Fordham School of Social Services.

His recent appointment as head of New York City's Human Services Administration puts him in charge of the entire welfare and social services program for that city.

Further information about the conference is available from the School of Social Work at RIT, 464-2018.

Dr. M. Joseph Klingensmith, associate professor in the College of Science, remembers when RIT's "greenhouse" was one bank of fluorescent lights used on the old campus before the move to Henrietta in 1968. Today, the modern facility behind the College of Science is home to the variety of tropical and other plants used in Botany courses and for other class projects. Student volunteers attend to the details of running the greenhouse, and Dr. Klingensmith says he's often called on to give first aid to ailing plants belonging to students or faculty members. The giant split-leaf philodendron he's pictured with was spindly and unhealthy when it was brought to the greenhouse two years ago. Today, it virtually fills one of the three greenhouse sections. In another area, flowering camelias and azaleas started by the late Dr. Ralph Van Peurse, were covered with flowers for most of February.

New Alumni Programs

Dave Jones talks about one example of an alumnus helping augment admissions efforts: "With the energy crisis making travel more difficult and costly, an informed alumnus can be very effective in alerting admissions officers of students who are interested in RIT. That's especially true in an area we might not cover every year." Alumni Development Group staff will be concentrating on Syracuse, Cleveland and Boston this spring.

"The motivation to give is directly related to the amount of contemporary contact an alumnus has with his school," Bodwell concluded. "The Alumni Development Group will be about the task of creating new points of contact. The Admissions and Placement Programs are important beginnings. Later on we will be looking at other places within the Institute where such relationships can develop."

The number of alumni will grow considerably in the immediate future and will be an increasingly important part of the Institute's constituency, Belle-Isle said. It took 145 years to achieve 26,000 active alumni, but this number will double in just over a decade.

Energy Use

shut-downs of facilities during vacations (during Christmas vacation, for example, 80 per cent of the dormitories were closed and heat reduced to 55 degrees.)

Hussey said anyone with additional ideas for saving energy on campus should contact the Physical Plant department.

Grant Deadlines Listed

The Office of Grant and Contract Administration reminds all faculty and staff that the following are deadlines for program application. Since Institute review and approval must be accomplished prior to mailing a proposal, applicants are requested to forward their proposals to Grant Administration one week before the listed deadlines.
