RIT TV Center: Unlimited Future As 'One Of The Best'

No, Johnny Carson's Tonight Show isn't produced at RIT. But an awful lot of good TV programs are produced in the Institute's TV Center.

"We can do anything that anyone can do in TV except for color capability. This is probably one of the best (college or university) TV installations in the country."

If that sounds like boasting, William F. Lehman, head of the TV Center and associate director of Instructional Research and Development, appears to have reason to boast.

The TV Center in the lower level of the Wallace Memorial Library has three broadcast-quality black and white cameras in one studio, three closed-circuit cameras in another sutdio and full-color capability in recording on half-inch videotape and video cassettes. (RIT was the first school in this area to get video

A two-camera remote rig will go anywhere there's an AC outlet to plug it into. Portable TV equipment is available for faculty and occasional student use.

The center has every tape format-half--inch, three-quarter-inch, one-inch, and two-inch quadraplex. Any format can be transferred into any other format for use in the tape library.

The dorms and academic areas of campus are nearly completely wired for cable TV, which transmits three campus channels in addition to the four Rochester TV stations. It's possible for RIT to be a feeder for any cable system in the Rochester area.

With two-way capability, the cable system can originate programs from other areas. Close cooperation in this way with the television system in the new NTID complex is planned.

Dedicated to campus news, RIT's Channel 6 previews programs, promotes events by slide and runs an information crawl.

The closed circuit system can also carry all local FM radio stations if there's an FM radio on the receiving end.

A microwave system (called Instructional Television Fixed Service) links RIT's Henrietta campus to its Metropolitan Center at 50 W. Main Street and to Rochester School for the Deaf, Rush--Henrietta's Sperry High School, Monroe Community College, St. John Fisher College, Nazareth College and the Monroe County Department of Social Services.

TV transmission of courses and events among St. John Fisher College, Nazareth and RIT is still viable, though little used recently.

With access to every videotape library in the country, the videotape selection in the TV Center contains more than 1.000 titles.

Tuition, Room And Board Fees Hiked For 74--75

Undergraduate tuition and room and board charges will be increased in the 1974-75 year, President Paul A. Miller told students and their parents in a letter last week.

Miller attributed the increases to inflationary changes in the economy. His letter read:

"At every turn these days we are faced with the news of increasing costs due to inflation. Here at Rochester Institute of Technology we too see the daily impact of sharply rising prices for food, fuel, and the many other goods and services that are necessary for campus life.

"As the cost of education goes well beyond the amount paid by students, the Institute seeks increasing amounts of support from its friends. Accordingly, we are in the midst of implementing a major fund-raising ef-

'Easy Streak', Regional Transit's New Route, Will Provide Hourly Service To RIT

The "Easy Streak," the Regional Transit Authority's new transit line from Riverton to Rochester, will provide hourly service between RIT and downtown, transit officials said last week.

The service, scheduled to begin Monday, March 25 with the beginning of Spring Quarter, will connect Riverton, Kodak's Riverwood Marketing Center, RIT, and the University of Rochester with bus service from 6 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays.

At RIT, the bus will stop at the Administration circle, a new Park and Ride parking lot (to be established), and near the dormitory complex.

Cost of the increased service is being shared by RIT, Riverton, and the Transit Authority.

Announcement of the service came after months of negotiations between RIT and Transit Authority officials.

Effective March 25, 1974

fort in commemoration of our 150th Anniversary in 1979."

"To ever improve the quality of education and to further seek economies of operation is the job of the faculty and staff. Though our record in this regard is exemplary, we are continuing many initiatives in this area which hold significant promise for next year and beyond.

"Understandably, inflationary changes in the economy also influence costs to students. Accordingly, we see no alternative but to raise charges for the 1974-75 academic year to partially offset the inflation which we have experienced. Therefore, undergraduate tuition will increase $120 to a total of $2,400, except for the College of Business which will be $2,325, Room and Board will increase $126 to a total of $1,488. Undergraduate fees will remain at $130. Charges in the College of Continuing Education will be $43 per credit hour, an increase of $2. These increases will still leave the cost of an R.I.T. education below the median of New York State private institutions of higher education. We think that this is significant in view of the expensive nature of career oriented technical education.

equipment is academic instruction, says Lehman, although some specialized programs for local industry are produced.

During the day, nearly all the producers, directors, engineers, artists and photographers associated with the center are staff professionals, although a few students are employed as cameramen and engineering assistans.

The future of the TV Center is "unlimited," Lehman believes, as instructors and communicators turn more and more to videotape for transmission of information.

Lehman doubts, though, that the TV Center could compete with commercial broadcasting even if it offered continuous original programming.

"We're not in the entertainment business and there's no way we're going to compete with the commercial stations," he says. "You can't force culture and education on people, but they'll watch us if they have a real need to know. That's what we're into."

Institute Introduces Identification System, Plans New Signs, Stationery

RIT's letterheads, memos, and all other printed and audio visual material produced by the Institute will get a new look starting this quarter as a new graphic identification system is introduced.

Eventually, the new system will alter the look of campus signage and all materials produced for events such as Commencement.

Created after 18 months of study by a special committee composed of faculty, students and staff, the new identification system is to be introduced to deans and department heads beginning next week.

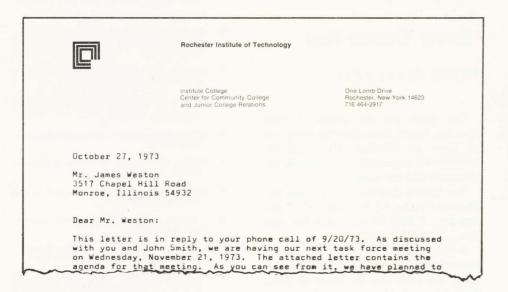

A guidebook designed to identify the basic components of the system will also be distributed.

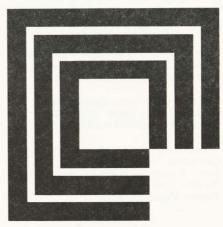

"What the Institute comes to mean in the years ahead as we move towards our anniversary year in 1979 will, to a great extent, be supported by the success of this program," President Paul A. Miller said.

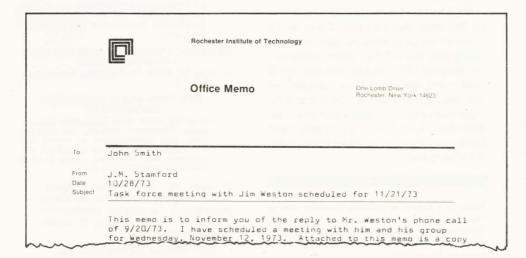

"We have grown rapidly and moved into new areas over the past few years, but at the same time inter-relationships among our educational activities have increased," Miller said. "One important way to communicate these relationships is to relate graphically our several colleges, divisions, and special services. Not only will this give us a greater unity and expression within the RIT community; it will also help us to interpret the Institute to many others," he said.

"A special task force of faculty and staff members, assisted by several students, has worked for the past 18 months to review the whole matter. Their recommendations formed the basis for this system which is an extension and comprehensive application of the graphic mark and signage now in use. It has been modified to better meet functional requirements and to suggest the spirit of the Anniversary years," he

The graphic identification mark (above) is the official graphic representation of RIT. It is a redesign of the original mark, which was developed when RIT moved to the Henrietta campus in 1968. Developers of the new mark say it represents the ideas of progressiveness, confidence, and academic orientation which are characteristic of the Institute. Institute stationery (left, above) will look like this, and memos (left, below) will look like this. New stationery will be printed only as existing supplies are depleted.
