NEWS BRIEFS

ESTABLISHMENT OF CENTER FOR COMMUNICATION RESEARCH ANNOUNCED AT RIT -- A new Center for Communications Research to apply advanced technology to the communications problems of the deaf and blind was announced at a press conference held at RIT last week.

The non-profit Center will make it possible for Rochester to maintain the technological expertise and capability which General Dynamics had started to direct toward peace-time communications prior to its recent Rochester electronics plant phase-out. The company's research department had worked voluntarily with the National Technical Institute for the Deaf on various projects since NTID came to RIT in 1968. The new Center will continue these programs.

Leaders from the Rochester academic community, led by Dr. Robert Frisina, RIT vice president and director of NTID, and officials of General Dynamics, have cooperated in developing plans for the new Center and have jointly sought support from the Rochester community and from state and federal representatives.

Dr. Robert A. Houde, former manager of research and advanced technology at General Dynamics, will head the Center. Eight General Dynamics researchers, who are preeminent in their field, will join the Center on a full-time basis and initially contribute their services until funds become available. The Center will seek grants from the federal government and foundations to direct its capabilities toward communications problems of the deaf and blind.

General Dynamics is contributing equipment and will make space available in its Goodman Street plant for the start of operations. General Dynamics also has donated to the Center two proposals which the company has made to the government for research contracts. The contracts would involve development of a technique for automatically analyzing grammar in the preparation of computer aided instruction for the deaf and a study of syntax and semantics for automatic speech recognition.

"At this time of shifting national priorities," Dr. Frisina said, "this approach would serve as a model for many communities affected by the lack of defense and space business." General Dynamics is phasing out its Rochester electronics plant due to a lack of defense business.

ESTABLISHMENT OF CENTER FOR COMMUNICATION RESEARCH ANNOUNCED

"We appreciate General Dynamics' assistance," Dr. Frisina said. "This Center will preserve the nucleus of capabilities that can be expanded to seek solutions to the problems of the deaf and blind."

Congressman Frank Horton (U.S. Representative, 36th District of New York) said he has been in contact with federal officials to determine what grant assistance could be made available to the Center.

"The establishment of this Center will, along with other community resources, contribute in advancing Rochester toward its becoming a national and international influence in matters pertaining to deafness," Dr. Frisina concluded.

CAROLINE SCHLEGEL BOOK COLLECTION ESTABLISHED AT RIT --
A check for $3,000 from the Monroe County Society for the Handicapped Inc. has been presented to RIT for the establishment of a Caroline Schlegel Book Collection to be housed in the Wallace Memorial Library.

The check was presented to President Miller by the Society's President, Mrs. Douglas C. Stoffel, in honor of the late Mrs. George C. Schlegel who founded the Monroe County Society for the Handicapped in 1934.

Mrs. Schlegel served as president of the Society for 32 years. She retired from the post in 1966 and died in August of 1969.

Mrs. Schlegel was the wife of the late George Schlegel, one of the founders of Schlegel Manufacturing Company of Jefferson Rd. in Henrietta.

Mrs. Schlegel, long active in community affairs and programs for the handicapped, donated to RIT in 1968 the Frank A. Stecher Collection in Lithography and Graphic Arts in memory of her father, who was a founder of Stecher Lithograph Company, now the Stecher-Traung-Schmidt Corporation of Goodman St., Rochester.

COUNTY MANAGER PRAISES RIT CO-OP PROGRAM -- Monroe County Manager Gordon A. Howe in a statement to the County Legislature recently praised the excellent working relationship the County Personnel office has with the RIT Cooperative Education program.

"For the past two years," Howe said, "the County of Monroe has conducted an extremely useful and successful program in cooperation with RIT to make use of cooperative education students as employees-in-training in County government."

The County of Monroe is the second largest co-op employer of RIT students in the area with students employed in the following departments: Personnel, Budgets, Data Processing, Finance, Social Services, Health, Purchasing, Monroe Community Hospital, the District Attorney's office and the Public Defenders office.

In his report to the County Legislature, Howe stated, "It should be noted that these employees, as part-time student trainees, receive only that flat hourly salary but do not receive the fringe benefits of the full-time county employees. Thus, from a fiscal standpoint, the taxpayers actually benefit directly by this program and the students receive both a satisfactory pay scale and valuable training."

Looking ahead, the program may be expanded to include six more positions under the social services division in order to make most efficient use of the highly qualified students available, a county spokesman stated.

GARC ASSISTS BRAZIL'S LARGEST NEWSPAPER -- Three men from the Graphic Arts Research Center (GARC) at RIT recently left Rochester for Brazil, to assist on a project that they have been involved in for more than two years.

The project pertains to a massive change in the printing plant of O Estado de Sao Paulo, the largest newspaper in Brazil. More than two years ago, O Estado decided to add a large color offset printing plant to its facilities.

Virtually no one in the newspaper's staff, however, was familiar with offset printing, so O Estado's management asked GARC to train the staff and establish the production procedures.

O Estado supplied GARC with information about what would be needed in the new plant and GARC helped select the type of auxiliary equipment needed, planned the reproduction system, and agreed to send men to Brazil to train the staff there.

In addition, two of O Estado's engineers came to Rochester for a week of intensive, individual training.

Zenon Elyjiw, technology supervisor at GARC, arrived in Brazil on Oct. 22. Two other GARC men, Richard McAllen and H. Brent Archer, will arrive in Brazil Nov. 13.

McAllen, director of the physical testing web offset laboratories at GARC, will spend about a week in Sao Paulo checking the printing press installation and condition of the equipment, particularly the operation of the Hoe "Lithomatic 60" color printing units.

Archer, manager of the Brazil project and assistant to the director of GARC, and Elyjiw will be training O Estado's staff. They plan to spend about a month in Sao Paulo.

"They have an intelligently trained technologist group," Archer commented. "The operating personnel, on the other hand, are probably less educated and trained than their counterparts in the United States. Working with O Estado's staff should be a real challenge.

"O Estado is to Brazil something like what The New York Times is to the U.S. With a daily circulation of 180,000, 300,000 on Sundays, they also produce four supplements to the Sunday paper, special women's, agricultural, literary and tourist sections. They also publish an afternoon daily, Jornal da Tarde, with a circulation of 65,000 and Edicao de Esportes, a Sunday sports guide with 40,000 circulation.

"All of these, except perhaps the women's section, will eventually be printed, in color, on new offset equipment," Archer said.

RIT FRATERNITY PROJECT BENEFITS INNER-CITY CHILDREN --

Halloween may have been a little more meaningful for numerous inner city children due to the cooperative efforts of the City Recreation Bureau, RIT students, and over 15 farmers from the Henrietta area.

Members of the RIT Chapter of Phi Kappa Tau, national social fraternity, in a two-day drive collected over 800 pumpkins from about 15 Henrietta and other area farmers. The students devised their own means of transportation to collect the pumpkins and transport them to RIT.

The City Recreation Bureau donated two trucks to pick up the pumpkins at RIT and distribute them to underprivileged children in the inner city.

Fred Best and Steve Ritter, co-chairmen of the RIT fraternity project, stated "We wanted to help inner city children that might not have the opportunity to purchase pumpkins in order that the kids could enjoy Halloween in the best way possible."

Best and Ritter stressed their appreciation for "the interest and cooperation from the City Recreation Bureau and the area farmers who donated the pumpkins."

SOCCKER STANDOUT IS FIRST REPEATER FOR ATHLETE OF THE WEEK --

The fortunes of RIT soccer have not been too rewarding of late, with only two wins in the last nine games. One positive factor, however, has been the play of Capt. Larry DeMejo. DeMejo, who was moved from the halfback spot he played for three years to the front line, has become the team's scoring leader. In three games last week, he netted five of the Tigers' eight goals, running his scoring streak to six games, and lifting his team-leading total to 12 goals. For his efforts, DeMejo has been named Athlete of the Week by the RIT Athletic Committee. He is the first RIT athlete this fall to receive the honor twice.

KNAACK-CARUSO COMBO SPARKS FOOTBALL WIN --

With 1:48 remaining in the game, Rich Knaack hit his tight end, Tom Caruso, with a 13-yard scoring pass, and Tim Mikula booted his first extra point in three games to give the Tigers a 7-6 win over St. Bonaventure on Oct. 31. The victory was the Tigers' third against two losses, and the manner in which the game was won was reminiscent of the victory over Plattsburgh earlier in the season. In that game, Knaack and Caruso combined their efforts for a touchdown with just 30 seconds left, with Knaack bootlegging in the two-point conversion for a 14-12 win.
