RIT Vets Cite Plight of POWs

"Give a Damn--Suffer With Them" will be the theme May 3 at RIT when the student veterans' organization sponsors a day of activities aimed at alerting the public to the plight of the American prisoner of war.

"We're interested in doing what we can to get our men back," said Martha Pratt, coordinator of Veteran's Affairs at RIT, "and we want to educate the public and as many students as possible to the plight of the American prisoner of war."

The film "I am an American Prisoner of War" will be shown at 2 p.m. in the Ingle Auditorium, College Alumni Union, on the Henrietta campus. Immediately following the film at 2:15 p.m. Ms. Gloria Bishoff, co-chairwoman of Remember Rochester P.O.W./M.I.A.'s (Missing in Action) will speak on "They are not Forgotten." A question and answer period will follow.

RIT students will man an information booth in the College Alumni Union throughout the day, to distribute literature, bumper stickers, buttons and bracelets inscribed with the name of a man who has been taken prisoner of war or who is missing in action.

"More than 1,500 Americans are either prisoners of war or missing in action in Southeast Asia," Miss Pratt said, "and while the Geneva Convention, agreed to by more than 120 nations, provides for equal, humane treatment of prisoners taken during armed conflict, there is in fact no equal treatment for Americans being held by North Vietnam and the Viet Cong."

Prof. Imes Dies

Homer Collett Imes, 64, professor of chemistry in the College of Science, died April 22 in Rochester General Hospital.

Prof. Imes was stricken in his home, 50 Durand Drive, Irondequoit, after returning from classes Wednesday, April 19. Prof. Imes, a chemistry teacher at RIT 27 years, received the RIT award for outstanding teaching in 1969.

In 1953, he and Dr. Ralph L. Van Peursem, now dean of RIT's College of science, coauthored a book titled "Elementary Quantitative Analysis."

Chemistry Department Receives $7,780 Grant

A National Science Foundation grant of $7,780 has been received by the Chemistry Department of RIT's College of Science.

The grant will be used to help finance research projects for five undergraduate students and six faculty members of the College of Science. The projects will be carried out during a 12-week period this summer.

Dr. Thomas P. Wallace, head of the Chemistry Department, said the research projects would involve the areas of analytical chemistry, biochemistry, organic synthesis and kinetics, nuclear magnetic resonance, and physical chemistry studies of liquids using light scattering techniques.

"Selection of undergraduate chemistry students in the program," Dr. Wallace said, "will be based on their academic record and demonstrated initiative."

Chemistry Department faculty members who will participate in the program are Dr. William N. Bigler, Dr. Robert E. Gilman, Dr. Earl Krakower, Dr. Terrance C. Morrill, Dr. Thomas S. Turan, and Dr. Wallace.

The National Science Foundation Grants totaled $3.9 million, and were awarded to more than 2,600 top college students throughout the country at 207 colleges, universities and nonprofit research organizations. The grants will be used to support 310 projects conducted under the Foundation's Undergraduate Research Participation Program.

GARC To Offer Two Spring Programs in Printing

Two programs that will present the latest developments in commercial web offset printing as well as composition systems will be offered this spring by the RIT Graphic Arts Research Center.

A Composition Systems Seminar will be conducted May 24-26, and a Commercial Web Offset Workshop will be held May 31-June 2.

The Composition Systems Seminar will provide special emphasis on phototypesetting, typography, and computers and their role in contemporary typesetting.

The program will also stress the importance of the systems approach in solving a particular company's typesetting problems. Instructors for the seminar will include specialists from industry, the RIT School of Printing, and Graphic Arts Research Center staff.

"Participants will have an opportunity to examine direct-impression machines and several phototypesetting systems," stated William D. Siegfried, training director for the Graphic Arts Research Center. "RIT has a wider range of graphic arts composition equipment than is provided in any comparable industrial education program we are aware of."

The Commercial Web Offset Workshop (May 31-June 2) is designed for commercial printers and their ink, paper, and other suppliers. The workshop will give participants a close look at how to deal with problems encountered in printing process inks on fine papers by web offset. Participants will be able to experience hands-on contact with equipment, under the supervision of RIT's School of Printing faculty, Research Center staff, and professional web press crew.

For further information about the spring programs, and other Graphic Arts Research Center education programs for industry, contact William D. Siegfried, Graphic Arts Research Center.

'SICKLE CELL TRAIT AND SICKLE CELL ANEMIA' COURSE TO BE OFFERED

A basic training course on "Sickle Cell Trait and Sickle Cell Anemia" will be presented by the Extended Services Division at RIT's Metropolitan Center, 50 West Main St., May 9 through 31.

The course will be held Tuesdays and Thursdays, 1:15 p.m. to 3:15 p.m., May 9 through May 31. Program Director is Ms. Naomi Chamberlain, director, Community Health Unit, University of Rochester. There will be NO COST to participants.

Those interested in more information or registration should contact James M. Papero, RIT Extended Service Division.

Criminal Justice . . .

Edward S. Ryan

The program is aimed at training people from all segments of the community for professional positions in criminal justice work at the local, state and federal level.

Ryan has an AB degree from Fordham College, an MPA from City University of New York and a PhD from the School of Criminal Justice at the State University College of New York at Albany.

Bernstein said the new program will lead to a Bachelor of Science degree in Criminal Justice, and that courses will be offered through both RIT's day and evening colleges.

Ryan, 30, will join RIT July 1, Dean Bernstein said.

CCE Now Offering Part-time Scholarships

Applications are now being accepted for part-time scholarships in Rochester Institute of Technology's College of Continuing Education, Ronald J. Hilton, academic administrator of RIT's Metropolitan Center, has announced.

The scholarships are intended to give "financial assistance to financially and culturally disadvantaged potential students who might benefit substantially from higher education," he said.

Scholarship preference will be given to prospective students who have very limited personal resources and who aren't eligible for any other form of scholarship aid.

Scholarship recipients are expected to provide one-third to one-half of their own tuition, and the scholarship is designed to pay the difference.

Last year, more than 30 scholarship grants were made through this scholarship program, which is funded partially by the Wegman Foundation.

"The College of Continuing Education is dedicated to the continuing education of area residents in the hope that they may secure better jobs, greater personal and financial satisfaction, and fuller lives," Hilton said.

He said one recipient is now a full time HEOP (Higher Education Opportunities Program) student after building confidence in her ability as a student while on scholarship. Another recipient acquired an Associate's degree last summer and is presently working toward a Bachelor's degree. A third grant is helping a severely handicapped person come closer to her goal of helping others similarly handicapped.

Those interested in more information about the scholarship program may contact Hilton at the Metropolitan Center, 464-2905.
