Kayla Zerby, a first year PTC student, won a Grand Prize in the essay category of the Institute Writing Contest. The prize is worth $250. Kayla was recognized at an awards luncheon last week.

Students were asked to write an essay on some aspect of how life has changed since September 11th. The title of Kayla's winning essay is "The word continues to spin – even after September 11th."

The contest is sponsored each year by the Institute Writing Committee, which is composed of faculty from every college at RIT and is chaired by the Institute Writing Director, Kathy Schumacher. Awards are presented in two categories, the essay and creative writing.

Congratulations to Kayla.
