Adam Stone, a third year PTC student, is one of the winners of the Oticon Focus on People Awards 2002. Adam was selected from more than 200 nominees, with the 15 winners each earning top honors in one of the program's five categories. Adam was the second place winner in the Full-time Student category.

In addition to this, the most recent honor, Adam has served as a PTC Peer Mentor during the 2001-02 academic year and is presently the designer for the forthcoming issue of Liberal Smarts.

Now in the sixth year, the Oticon Focus on People Awards program is designed to focus attention on common misconceptions about hearing loss, correct negative stereotypes and motivate people with hearing loss to take advantage of help that is available to them.
