Brandon Borgna, a third-year student in Professional & Technical Communication, has won the 2005 Ethics and Communication Award. The prize, made possible through a generous donation from a PTC alumnus, was established in 2004 by the Department of Communication to recognize outstanding work in the study of ethics and communication by an undergraduate student enrolled in the PTC program.

Brandon is being recognized for an essay on the ethics of visual representations of RIT in its promotional literature. He will receive his award at a Department of Communication event during the final week of the spring quarter.

Congratulations, Brandon!
