Kathleen Marchaesi, a Communication & Media Technologies M.S. degree candidate, will present her thesis research, “The Mainstream Press: Then and Now. Has the prominence of sensational news changed in 100 years?” on Monday, 18 December at 11:00 a.m., in the Alumni Room of the SAU. Kathy’s research explores the levels of sensational news reporting in three distinct periods of journalism history by examining the largest mainstream newspaper in America, The New York Times, during the yellow journalism (1895-1904), jazz journalism (1920-1929) and modern eras (1995-2004).

All are welcome to attend.
