Ricochet Public Relations, a boutique life sciences and technology media relations agency located in New York City, seeks a highly motivated individual to join its growing team in the Rochester office. The Rochester office caters to the area's biotech, pharmaceutical and technology based companies.

Prior public relations experience is not necessary, but exceptional writing ability, research skills and intellectual curiosity are essential. Interns are responsible for account support (e.g., writing, media monitoring, media relations, client relations, possibly some pitching) and campaign management.

Ricochet is looking for individuals who have the specific potential to become the future executive management team of this office. The internship position is unpaid, but could lead to a full-time, salaried position on the Ricochet team and opportunities for internal promotion.
