Editorial

A Presidential Conspiracy

I thought it was fake, too. That was before I got the call.

It was the Saturday before last. I showed up at the Reporter Office early, wanting an extra hour to work on my editorial before the art staff came in. I had writer's block, though, and decided to listen to the RIT Rings messages on the answering machine to procrastinate for a few minutes. By the time the art director showed up at noon I had already made a few calls looking into the matter and was convinced that a conspiracy was afoot.

The Rings call that had me so startled?

Friday 2:47 a.m.

"I was looking through an old Reporter and saw in Rings that some [censored] was being a [censored] and talking about her co-op and how [censored] pointless it was. I just wanna say, oh yeah? For my co-op my supervisor had me put a [censored] box in a locker. You heard me! A box in a [censored] locker. [Censored] that [censored]! Another time that [censored] [censored] made me..."

The call goes on, citing other irrelevant tasks this student had to complete, but nothing worth noting here. To my knowledge, the student has no idea that he has placed a large amount of bribe money in that locker.

I'm getting ahead of myself, though. Two days previous I received an unmarked envelope that was slid under my office door sometime between the time I left the office (around 11:50 p.m.) and the time I showed up Friday afternoon (12 p.m.). It contained the letter on the next page, and the documents enclosed on pages four and five.

Take the time to read her letter now.

After receiving the call I scanned the letter in before taking liberties in investigating the paper it was printed on. I tried three procedures to see if it held any additional information: I held a blacklight to it, revealing nothing. Then, I exposed it to a candle to check for any invisible acid-based inks, which also revealed nothing. Finally, I did a rubbing to reveal anything that happened to be written on top of the letter. I scanned that in, as well, printed it, and placed it on top of the copied letter. I put the envelope through the same three processes, but it revealed nothing.

The point, however, is that I'm stuck. I've been working restlessly this whole week trying to figure out where this bribe money is located so that I can prove that this conspiracy is happening. Hence, I put this out to the public. I have compiled dossiers on who I feel are the main players in this conspiracy: Dr. Simone, Dr. Destler, and Dr. Watters.

Although I suspect that the money—which I am convinced is in a locker on this campus, secured by a combination lock—will be confiscated by the proper authorities as evidence if it is found, I feel passionately enough that this be uncovered that Reporter will match the value of the money and award it to whoever finds it.

My research is certainly far from complete; I have marked up many documents to explain what I believe their significance is, but will admit that I may have jumped to some false conclusions. There is more research to be done, and I am certain that the mystery cannot be solved using merely the 16 pages you hold in your hands. If I discover anything else, I will post it on our website (www.reportermag.com) as I find it.

Good luck.

Letter/Contents Third Candidate

Map

Dear Casey,
An awful injustice has been done on this campus. I was supposed to be the third finalist in the RIT Presidential Search, but I was forced to drop out of the running.

First, I was offered a bribe, which I obviously refused. I was told that the money was been placed in a locker on this campus and that I would receive the the combination upon dropping out of the running. I had no intentions of dropping out until the threats began. All communication I have had with the bribers has been through letters, first at my home, then at my current place of employment,

I'm not sure who has anything to gain from my dropping out, although I would imagine that the other candidates and Dr. Simone would be a wise starting point in any investigation. They may lead you to the offender, who indirectly threatened the life of my daughter by leaving the severed head of a stuffed tiger in my home, next to a portrait of her.

I will be leaving with my family on a "long vacation" I'm afraid that my life is still in danger, as the culprits don't want me to be able to talk about the bribe money. Over the past weeks I have been trying to find this locker so that I could use the money as evidence. With only letters and the severed heads of stuffed animals, it is merely my word against theirs, and I have no idea who is to blame.

As a student reporter, I assume you can get closer to the candidates than I can. Finding that the culprit has the combination could prove that they are responsible for having the money placed in the locker. If there is more than one culprit, then the guilty parties are likely to have pieces of the combination.

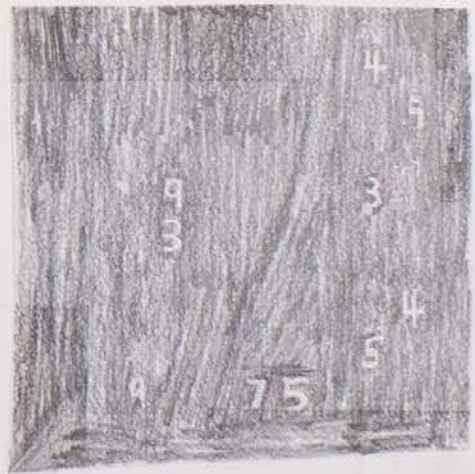

Obviously, they would have removed the money by now but I found a note on my windshield yesterday morning that says, "Something went wrong. They don't know where the money is." It is likely that they had a runner place the money somewhere, and perhaps something happened to them. Either that or someone defected and moved the money to a different locker. Perhaps I do have an ally.

I don't know the details, but it is strange that I wasn't told the combination and location after I dropped out of the running. Please investigate. Hopefully you will have better luck than I have.

A company was interviewing people for four jobs that had become available. One Monday morning, four people came in to interview. Each interviewee talked with a different manager about a different job. Determine the full name of each interviewee, the full name of each manager, and the job each interviewed for.

1. The four people interviewed were Wanda, the person interviewed by Theo, the person who applied for the janitor job, and the person who interviewed with Mr. Watts.
2. Terry Fallo didn't interview with Kate. Sara's last name wasn't Smith.
3. Ms. Jones didn't interview for the officer's job. Mr. Locke didn't interview Wanda. Ryan's last name wasn't Bourn.
4. Adam, was interviewing applicants to fill a position for an analyst. Ted's last name wasn't Spoon. Kate Heart didn't interview a woman.
5. The person whose last name was Spoon interviewed with the person whose last name was Bourn, but not for the position of trainer.
6. Sara didn't interview with Ryan.

Things are going to plan, soon we'll have the position secured and the project will be a forgone conclusion. No sign that the campus is on to us. The candidate seems to be cooperating and there are always the other options we've discussed. The golden egg is in the nest. Our lover boy put it there. It's being watched over by the man with the hollow eyes. Right, right, left, left, right, right, left. I think. The portfolio is developing nicely isn't it? Glad we could work out this deal. Power for money for money for power. When this is all over, perhaps we should get together for a weekend in Bali. There's been some concern over the association of the corporation and the committee so I've taken necessary precautions with my identity.

Global Village Finally Breaks Ground.

July 11, 1990 - After negotiations started in January, Global Village Now, LLC and the University of Hawaii at Manoa have finally begun construction of Global Village.

Chancellor Al Simone was on-hand for the ceremonial first dig and was beaming with excitement for the construction to finally be underway.

"I thought this day would never come," said Simone with a decorative lei and a golden shovel. "But the hard work of everyone over at Global Village Inc. and here at UH is finally about to pay off, not only for the university, but the students and the community as a whole."

The decision to build Global Village was made at the beginning of this year, as the University of Hawaii has a large International student population and wanted to reach out to its students.

The construction will continue throughout the rest of the summer and should be completed by November. After the eleven a.m. ceremony, mai tais and Hawaiian punch were served in celebration of the momentous occasion.

Bill,

Our last Presidential Search committee meeting before choosing the top candidates was today. I think they all took my bait. You and Jim are gold, there were plenty of fiscal conservative types chummy with Jim and your academic record is impeccable—if I didn't know better I would have to congratulate you for dreaming up a couple dozen research efforts, geez...

Now, there is still the third candidate—a female—who might give us some trouble. Got any ideas? The pluralism people are going to be gunning strong for her. But I think that we should be fine. Just remember to tout your openness and whatever that creativity/innovation thing you talk about is, also be awed by RIT's "extraordinary assets" like NTID, etc. (say you want to learn sign language)!

Trust me, Bill, you and Jim are the prime numbers here. We got this.

Jimmy,

It sure was nice to see you again last weekend, dear. I tried turning on that Internet, but I just couldn't get it to work. I'm not sure why you kids like it so much... letters are so much nicer than e-mails.

I was looking through our photo albums yesterday, and I came across this picture of you and Billy. You should show it to him... you two were so cute together! You look just like your father, pumpkin. He'd be so proud of you now.

Give me a call this weekend. I can't figure out how to use this cellular telephone of yours...

I've drafted up a letter of "persuasion". What do you think?
- Mr. Money

Regarding your candidacy for President of RIT:

We highly advise that you withdraw from the race. You may think you're qualified, but you're not. This is a man's job. You're better off in some administrative job. This is an engineering school, and you're not an engineer, or a technician. You're from some hippie liberal arts school that spews out more drunkards than Penn State.

It'd be a shame if your kids didn't come home from school one day, or if their mother wasn't around to pick them up from soccer practice... Quit now, and you'll never have to worry about that. Just get that red dress that you got at Sears in Marketplace mall last weekend, and announce your withdrawal from the race. It looks very good on you.

If you care about your family, announce that you're withdrawing to focus on personal issues, and we'll leave you be. You have four days to decide.
