Hoppe named to new position

Registrar Donald A. Hoppe has been named Dean of Admissions and Records for the Institute, effective July 1.

The newly-created position was announced by Dr. James B. Campbell, vice president of Student Personnel Services.

In his new position, Hoppe will direct admissions and academic records procedures for 3,000 fulltime and 9,000 Evening College students at RIT

Hoppe has been registrar at RIT since 1961 and prior to that he had worked in the Evening College division since 1952 when he joined the school as director of traffic safety research.

A native of Waverly, Iowa, Hoppe received his bachelor and masters degrees from Iowa State University.

of the conference to be held April 1 and 2 in the Treadway Inn in Batavia. The conference will be open to organizational presidents, members of the Student Activities Board and student senators.

Those who will attend the conference were urged by Baker to sound out fellow students on a variety of topics for discussion. "Participants will be asked not to limit themselves only to the new campus, but to aim at the extended future -- to think in terms of 1980, for example," stated Baker. It is hoped that Judge John Lomenzo, Secretary of the State of New York, will be the keynote speaker.

Walter Finn (Mech 3) and Ed Hauer (Chem 5) were inducted into the Senate. Nominations for Student Association offices were opened and Denton Ortman (Pr 3) and Jim Henderson (Pr 2) were nominated for president. Gary Proud (Bus (Continued on page 2)

The basic purpose of the program is to introduce teachers and students to the theory and practice of scientific research, according to Dr. K. Thomas Finley, program director and a member of the College of Science faculty.

The reason for the recess is that convocation exercises, originally scheduled for June 4, had to be delayed until June 11. The original date for convocation was reserved with the War Memorial two years ago, according to Campbell. Due to an unavoidable conflict with the American Bowling Conference, however, the War Memorial was unable to uphold their commitment.

the uninvolved student

Everyone has heard of the man who "doesn't want to become involved." He is the scourge of our society; the man who won't help another man, or the man who will never do anything beyond the very least necessary to survive.

Final time is a good time to look at the first two quarters of this year and the students who would not become involved. This is the student who takes only the required courses, works for a 2.0, has no interests beyond the classroom and the Pastime, and generally rolls through four years at RIT without an interest in anything.

This is the type of student who will waste at least 50 per cent of his college education. He will throw it away and never realize it is gone. But worst of all, he will never become part of the real student body, and he will never really care about his college life.

RIT is different from some schools, in that our school is not so impossible difficult that a student must work to the point of exhaustion every day just to meet course requirements. The school gives the student time to develop experience. Now the student must just take the initiative.

Spring Quarter will be far more active than Winter Quarter -- with Student Association elections, organizations elections of new officers and acceptance of new members for next year, and of course, Spring Weekend. This will also be the quarter when more and more students will have to get involved. Especially during this quarter, the students will have their own co-curricular activities. The Reporter extends its enthusiasm to the men who will make this next quarter one of RIT's best. And we sincerely hope that the entire student body will give their extra efforts to make this their best quarter.

Dr. White must have been pleased, but just a little disappointed. Last Sunday was the All-Greek Sing, and Dr. White, director of the RIT Glee Club, was on hand to witness a fine display of choral music.

There was little doubt in anyone's mind about the quality of the program. Roughly 80 men and women, representing the greek organizations, blended their voices in melodious interpretations of contemporary music, reflecting unusual talent and a great deal of hard work.

Dr. White must surely have been delighted with the performance, but just as surely, he must have been a bit disappointed that more of these people could not contribute their efforts to RIT's Glee Club. If a group as large as that which was represented last Sunday could be combined in a choral group, RIT would have an exceptionally good chorus.

Congratulations go to all the fraternities and sororities for again proving their wide range of interests and talents. Last Sunday the greeks gave RIT a reason to be proud. D.G.G.

In light of the poor turnout at the past concert sponsored by the Student Association, what activities do you feel the student body will support?

I thought the past concert was definitely a good idea although prices were a little high. I feel the selection of entertainers was also very good. I think possible some-thing along the folk singing line might draw a better crowd and I would be more inclined to go to a performance of this nature. I feel creating student interest is also a big factor to overcome. If this is solved there will be no problems of student support in the

Harry Helvik (Mech 3) I don't see why they didn't support the past weekend. I think one reason could have been not enough or else the wrong kind of publicity. It's not that they are disinterested but they weren't aware as they should have been. Concerts of this nature should go over. Also no background was given on the per-formers till the last minute.

Rosemary Zieno (Med Tech 2) They would have supported a concert like the past one if it could have been held on campus. Also there could have been a better choice of entertainment for only a small cross-section of the student interests were represented. I feel on the new campus there will be more of a turnout because: 1) the students will be isolated from the city and 2) there will be more of a school spirit -- I hope.

Ed Kagan (Pr 1) Speaking for myself, I am a commuter; I find it rough to get here for extra-curricular activities. Also one of the chronic problems of all college students is money. However, for the type of entertainment the prices were reasonable. Also if it were possible to have concerts on campus it would improve attendance be-cause there would be no transportation problems.

John Bugbee (Bus Adm 1) past entertainment, from what I've heard, was terrific. However, the lack of attendance was due to the high prices but with the quality of the entertainment the were reasonable. I also heard that because of transportation problems some students had to leave early due to the late start of the show. I also feel the publicity campaign was lacking.

Is it important that students: attend assemblies, march in picket lines, shout at basketball games, have access to cigarette machines,

Why do:

Fortunately RIT does not know where she is going (official statements to the contrary not withstanding), and she glaringly displays the excellent with the deficient in teaching, creativity, and scholarship. This is fortunate because the most difficult task men undertake is questioning themselves and their institutions; indeed, for most men it may be impossible. But RIT is young (its first bachelor degrees were granted in the 1950's), our fast growth has made rigid policy impossible, and within two years we will literally pull ourselves out by the roots and transplant ourselves in new soil, with all that means in increased stature and wealth. It will take us another two or three years

RIT Counseling Center offers service for students, industry

by Irving Van Wert

The RIT Counseling Center, in addition to satisfying student needs, serves industry by testing applicants for industrial positions.

This program, established in 1942, was instituted to test individuals who fall into one of the following categories: (1) employees being considered for transfer or upgrading; (2) applicants being considered for employment; and (3) other groups of employees whose characteristics and poten-

Reading lab has Saturday classes

Many students are not aware that the reading lab is open on Saturdays and that there are three levels of instruction being offered. The two regular courses which run for three hours on 15 consecutive Saturdays are for senior reading im-10th grade, second semester, to college entrance, and junior reading improvement from 8th to 10th grade first semester. The senior students are usually still in school, although some return after graduation to increase their abilities.

A series of classes for elementary school children consists of six teachers giving one-hour sessions. At each of the three levels, the individual's needs determine the number of course hours he must attend, but A. B. Herr, lab director, stresses that he "wants someone who is going to work." He prefers to have students who feel a need to improve rather than those who are forced by parents to attend.

Brochures for enrollment in the summer course will be out in March. The summer course will emphasize vocabulary mastery and extension, comprehension and retention, an acquaintance with study reading and the correlation of different reading speeds with different purposes.

Herr added, "People learning here are like machines. We're not adding any new parts; it is more more like adding Casite to make the old parts work better." tialities the employer wishes to discover.

According to Dr. Laurence Lipsett, director of the center, a candidate is referred to the center for an interview and the battery of tests which have been chosen for this particular job. The tests, including one or more intelligence tests, projective personality tests, and various other measures designed to select and classify applicants for a specific job, usually require about one day for administration. Testing covers mental ability, aptitudes, academic achievement, occupational interests, and emotional adjustment.

Often, Institute counselors visit industrial establishments to sur-vey jobs and working conditions. reason for this is that psychological testing for industry yields the best results when interviews and tests are planned with a thorough understanding of the job for which the selection has been made.

After the test and interview results have been studied, a written analysis and a test profile are prepared for each individual and sent to the employer. In some cases these results serve to confirm the company's findings. In others, there is a difference of opinion and steps are then taken to reconcile these differences.

At a later date a second form may be sent to employers asking them to comment on the success of the testee. This provides the Counseling Center with a fairly clear answer to the frequently asked question, "How accurate are you?"

According to Lipsett, the Center is accurate in its predictions 72 per cent of the time.

"Think less, and enjoy it more." "I photograph to present my own reality."

Steve Foster and Jim Erwin are showing their photographs in the RIT Library through March 11. In many ways this show is a demonstration of some of the polarities contained in the photographic medium. Polarities of appearance - reality, outer experience - inner experience, human action - human response. This happens because photography is a process wherein physics is synthesized with psy-chology. The above polarities occur in mixed proportions in both Foster and Erwin's works.

In Foster's pictures of people the persons are treated as photographed objects, not as personalities. However, the people, in re-lation to their environment and its treatment, begin to reach this viewer in a way that is not merely ordinary - they are NOT pictures of "human interest." As a result, they are deceptive upon a first glance (which so often is all they get "Oh, People Pictures. hummm, this one sorta' looks like that one.") Instead there is a subtle and sensitive articulation of human forms in light and space and sometimes a suggestion of a psychologic or social context. Fosportraits point to another possibility in photography, i.e., the photographic manipulation of personality. Multiple exposures, multiple focus, "unseen" shapes.
Sometimes these "tricks" penetrate the people, sometimes they provide clues. Foster's pictures bring to mind a statement made by Oliver Wendell Homes in the Atlantic Monthly, May 1863. "There is a new source, accessible only within the last few years and never, so far as we know, employed for its elucidation, namely the instantaneous photograph. . . . We have selected a number of these instantaneous views of the streets and public places of Paris and New York, each of them showing numerous walking figures, among which some

Historic Bible pages at library

A collection of 60 Leaves of Famous Bibles dating from 1121 to 1935 A.D. will be on display at the RIT Library during the month of March.

James Olin (Pr 4) owns the collection, which was assembled and collected about 30 years ago by Otto F. Ege, Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio.

Of major interest to art and printing students, the collection reflects changes in both manuscript writing of the 12th through the 14th centuries and the progress of printers and their presses in printing the Bible from the 15th through 20th centuries.

Such representative printers as Jenson, Aldus, Froben, Stephanus, Baskerville, Rogers, Meynell, Green, and Thomas, comprise the collection. Each leaf is displayed in a windowed cover with a plate annotating a brief history of the Bible -- its creator and printer.

Leaves from particularly interesting Bibles are: an Armenian Manuscript, The Great, Matthew, London Polyglot, Elio Indian, He and She King James, Doves Press, and Oxford Lectern Bibles.

The collection will be on display as follows: first week, 12th - 15th centuries; second week, 16th century; third week, 17th and 18th centuries; and fourth week, 19th and 20th centuries.

lished by members of the Howard M. Brophy family of Detroit.

Known as the "Howard M. Brophy Memorial Scholarship Fund," the award will provide $1,000 per year for four years of study in the graphic arts field at RIT. The first scholarship will be awarded in September.

Rex L. Brophy, president of the Brophy Engraving Co., a firm founded by his father, said scholarship candidates must be from the Detroit area, demonstrate an interest in graphic arts higher education and have the recommendation of active members of the Advertising Agency Production Men's Club of Detroit.

The scholarship program was established in conjunction with the firm's long-standing philosophy of providing a continuing education for its employees.

Further information about the scholarship may be obtained from George Hedden, director of admissions, or Robert Belknap, student financial aid officer.

Curriculum change doubles library use

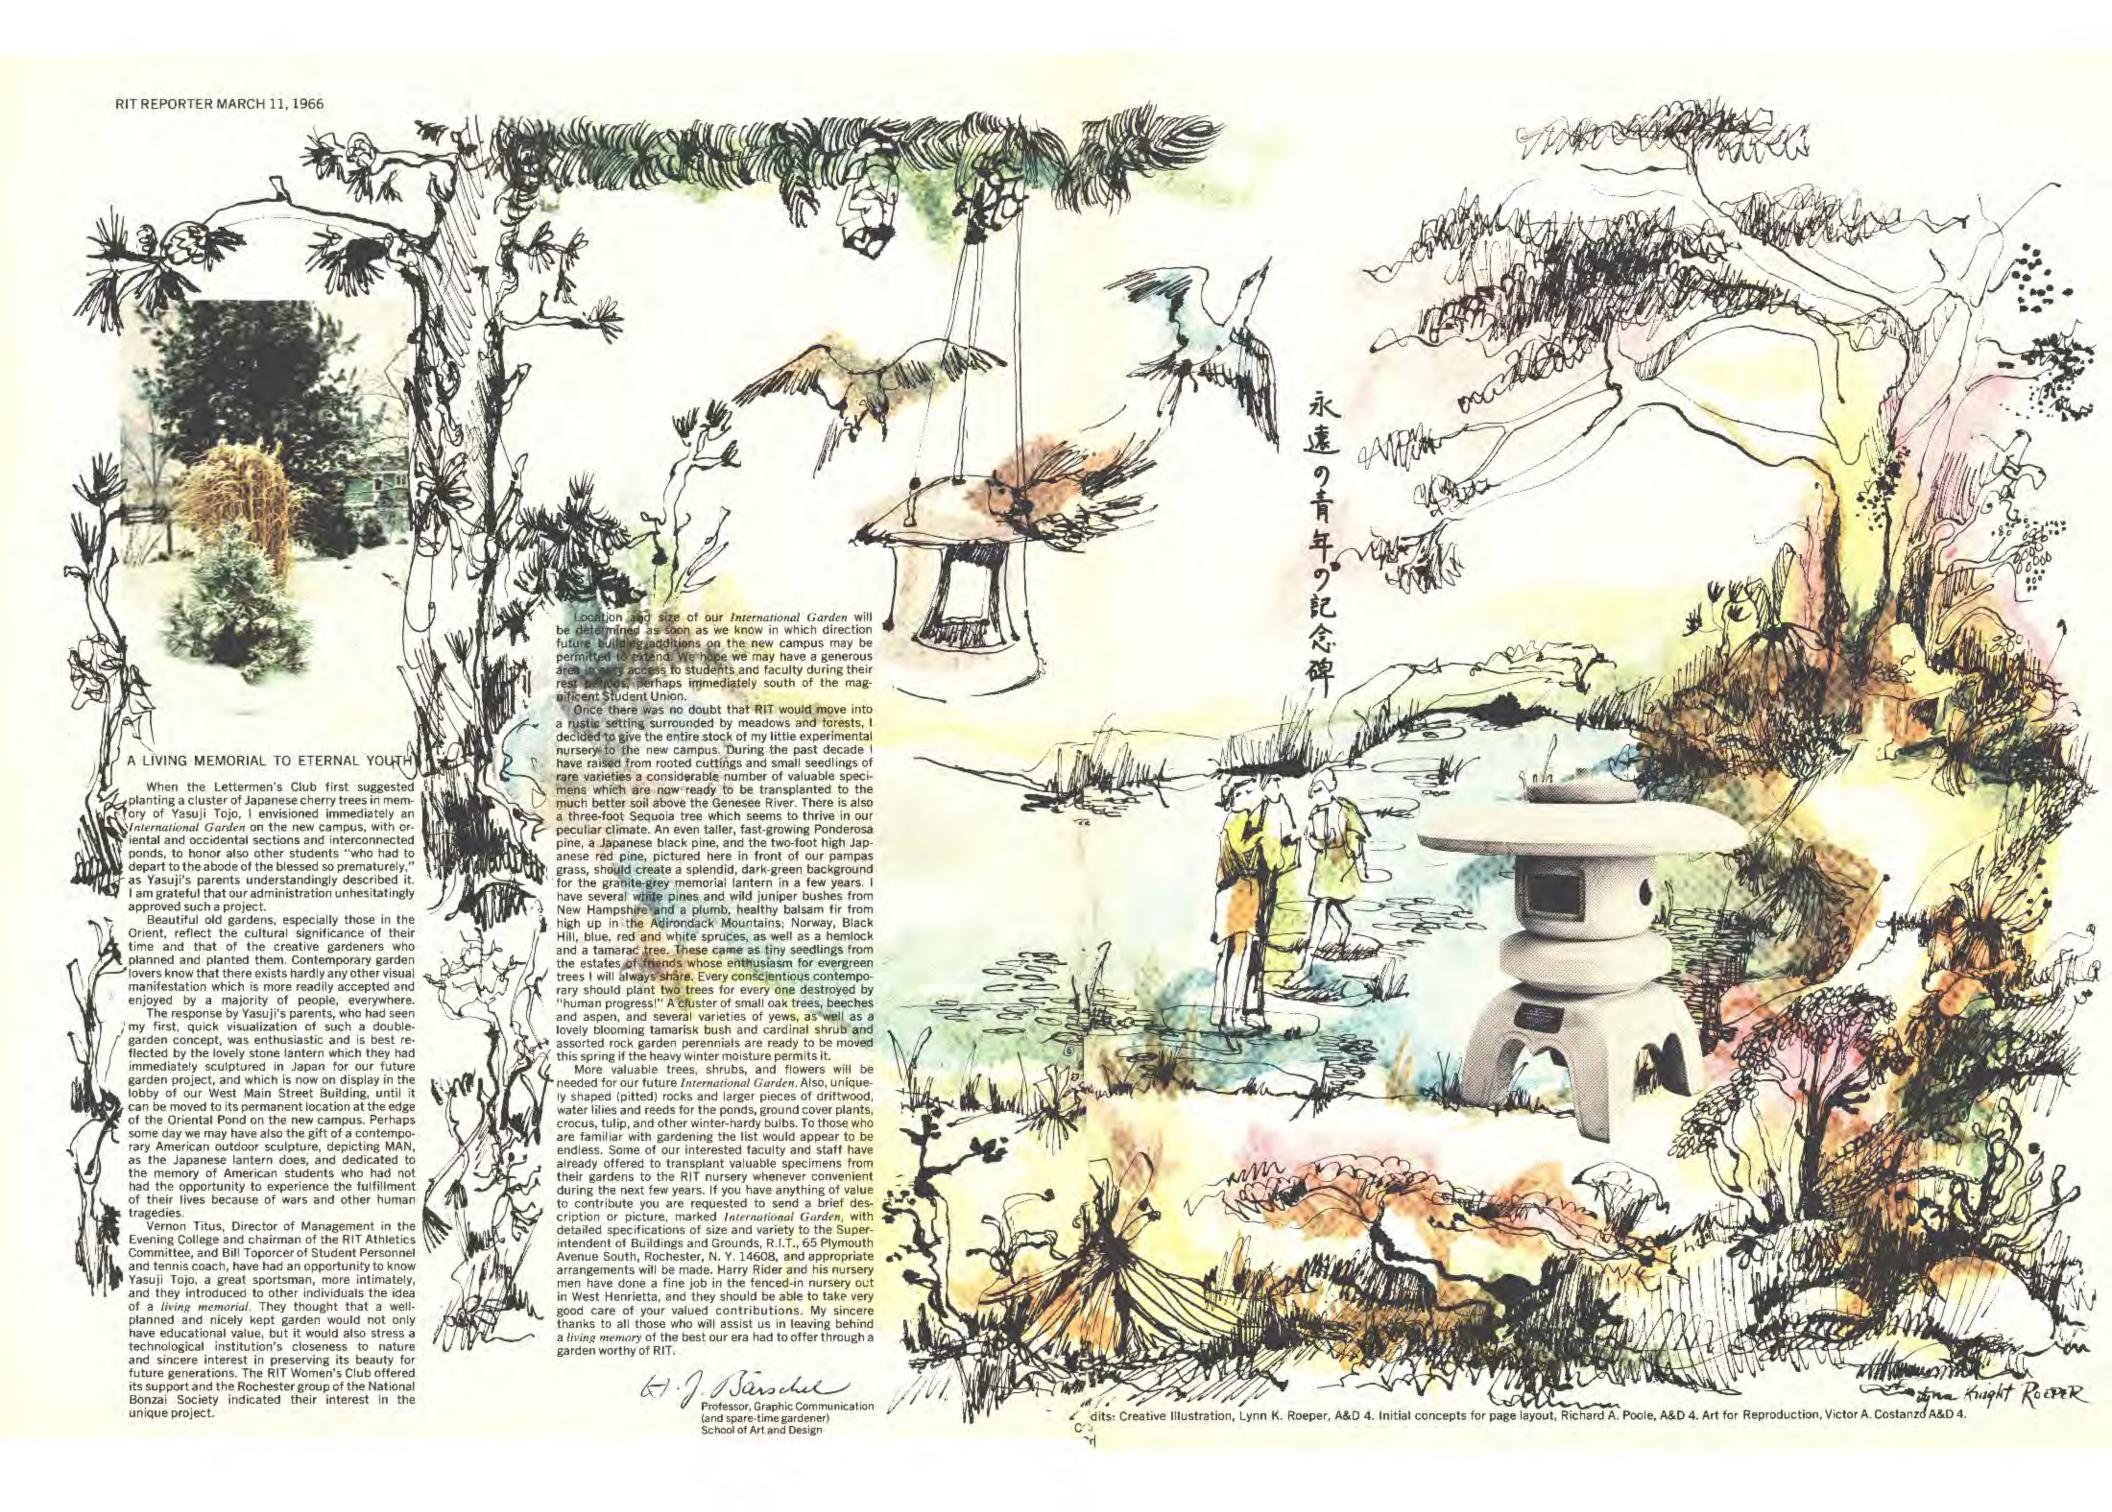

Thomas Strader, director of the RIT Library, announced that library book circulation is up 50% over last year. Also, much to his approval, the number of people using the library has doubled since last year.

"We attribute the greater use of the library to the new curriculum initiated at RIT," said Strader. "We here at the library are very pleased with its growing use."

after that before we can settle down into the normal mediocre rut of higher institutions.

These years immediately ahead will be precious years. We could use them to pose the revelatory questions that administrative manuals and even M.I.T. and Berkeley do not pose, the ones lying behind the problems of empty assembly seats, class absence fines, and the lack of communication among students, faculty, and administrators. But in all probability, if the history of institutions is a reliable guide, we will instead squander these years -- and never even know what we have missed.

* "Communication is a two-way street" -- Now there's one we've all heard before! Our employers, our friends, and even our children want to be informed of our activities. The Alumni Relations Office is no exception. We too, would like to be informed.

The personal notes on this page come from many sources - unsolicited letters from alumni, while most desirable, are in shortest supply. The majority of the news comes from a clipping service that sends articles on alumni only if the name of RIT appears. Other sources are your employer's public relations department, information forwarded by an Institute faculty member or department head, or our reading of local newspapers. These sources leave much to be desired.

To continue to publish and hopefully to expand NEWS OF ALUMNI, your help is needed. A postcard of newsworthy information regarding your occupation, promotion, marriage or family addition is very much appreciated and helpful. If possible, a letter with an enclosed photograph would be of greater service. Let us inform over 16,000 other alumni of your achieve-

In addition to news items, we are constantly seeking new addresses and employment information. Employment data is very valuable. Often the reception we receive when approaching a company for support is directly related to the number of alumni employed and the positions they hold. The new Central Placement Office uses this information when talking to prospective interviewers. On the mailing label of this week's Reporter you will see the name or abbreviation of your company affiliate according to our records. Would you take just a moment to check this -- if correct, or if none appears, please let us know.

On most of our mailings you will notice the words, "Return Requested." If you move, the mailed material is returned to us rather than forwarded to you. Each returned piece costs us eight cents. With a changeof-address card you can aid in cutting our postage expense while insuring current mailings will be sent without interruption.

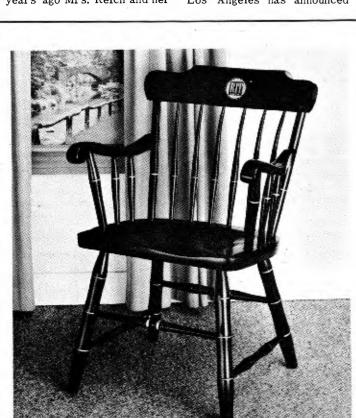

Two-way communication is important -- to your friends, to yourself, and to the alumni office. Now, while reminded and relaxed, how about that postcard or letter?

What should we start the column off with this week? How about the Eastman concert? That is always good for a laugh. The facts are rather simple. Due to the poor support given by you, the student, you, the student, lost about $6,000. Maybe this should be taken seriously and we should forget about bringing any big name entertainment to campus for Spring Weekend. Evidently the Student Association was wrong to assume that students wanted a little culture. Instead, maybe the Student Association should reserve bar stools down at the Pastime, give away free lollypops over at Main Street, or just pay for your tuition. The best thing for them to do is to throw a blast in the gym like everyone else because that's the only event on campus that gets full support. LATEST & GREATEST:

RIT Seminar is chosen for film

RIT's Management Seminar program has been chosen for a national documentary film on continuing education.

The film is being prepared under the sponsorship of the Association of University Evening Colleges for showing throughout the nation later this year.

The RIT filming was completed by the Institute Office of Educational Research. The Management Seminar is being coordinated by the Extended Services Division, a section of the Evening College.

Individualists are necessary as members for Decem Jani

by Jack Cassetta

Decem Jani will elect a chairman and a secretary for next year at the March 11 meeting. At that time the new officers will be announced and the names of the graduating members will be released.

This is all in preparation for selecting replacements for DJ members who are leaving the Institute. At this time all students are urged to consider applying for membership when the application forms are available in two weeks.

New members can learn a lot good enough to carry the show.

My information is that a "big"

name recording organization could have been booked for this concert and I am sure the association would have been able to fill the house and not have lost $5,000.

This loss brings up the interesting point that if we (the student association members) were to take the risk of losing money, why did

The other area that I am concerned over is the general quality of the RIT Reporter. Although I cannot judge the literary quality of the writing, I do know something about Graphic Arts and Phoman at RIT four years ago, I have seen a constant decline in the technical quality of the Reporter and since RIT is supposedly the leader in the afore mentioned areas, it does not speak well for about RIT because Decem Jani is a unique association of students. Unburdened by departmental and organizational pressures, DJ members can develop a rare objectivity toward campus problems.

Dr. James B. Campbell and A. Stephen Walls, the advisors, share in discussions as equals, and "yes men" are not welcomed. No topic is out of order, and the discussions which fly across the table are representative of all RIT.

What can be gained by the individual student member? He gains a better understanding of RIT, its policies, its philosophy, and its people. He gives a critical judgment and analysis of campus problems. This is what makes Decem the same time it is an official publication of RIT. I am convinced that a decision has to be made as to which is more important.

Either it's going to be the students' paper and print what they feel should be printed, or it's going to take on a role as an official publication and meet the standards which are necessary to play this role. It cannot do both effectively.

I feel that the only thing that will be accomplished by this middle of the road attitude will be the alienation of the students' and faculty's interest and respect for what I feel can be one of the greatest institutions for higher learning in America today, the Rochester Institute of Technology.

Dear Editor:

The Activities Board is to be congratulated for attempting to give RIT a grand concert to liven up the Winter Quarter. Especial kudos to Doug Rose and Munn Dodd. If the concert was not a financial success no blame can be laid at their feet.

However, I hope that next year's concert (if it does become an annual affair) can start on time. The audience had every right to be restless and show their displeasure. One person sitting next to me put the idle time to good use and practiced on his harmonica. The 45-minute delay was so ridiculous that my date and I were ready to forget the whole thing.
It was also a mistake to ask the $3.50 ticket holders to move forward to fill up the holes in the $4.50 ticket section. This makes a guy look like an idiot for paying a dollar more for his seat than the guy next to him. This action also prompted the other sections in the theater to flock to better seats.

I know that the Activities Board will profit from its mistakes. I hope another concert is presented next year, because even with its annoyances this year's presentation was tremendously entertain-

Dear Editor:

Although this letter may get a bit long, I feel I want to put myself on record concerning two issues that affect RIT, tts' students, faculty, staff, and alumni. I make the following comments a constructive manner and fully realize that many are working quite hard to do their best, but I also feel there is always room for improvement.

I question the validity of several comments made in your issue of March 4 concerning the turnout of students at the Student Association Concert. The main blame for poor attendance was aimed at the students for not attending. If they did not attend (as they seem not to have) then some blame does rest on their shoulders. But WHY did they not attend? Could it be that the price of $4.50 was too rich for their pockets, or even $3.50. I believe that most of the $2.50 seats filled. Maybe the students feel the entertainment was not worth more

This brings up the matter of the entertainment itself. As one point of argument, Mr. Mann appeared at a school function last year. Why not something different? Secondly, why bill three groups as one program? You are in effect saying that any one of them alone is not
