

Summer Quarter Internship in Rochester

Bruce A. Austin baagll@rit.edu

29 January 2008

Rochester Business Journal, a leading publisher of business news and information, is looking for summer interns. Interns will earn a small stipend and work mainly in the editorial department. From brainstorming ideas and writing articles to proofing pages, interns will be involved in many activities for the Journal, REAL Magazine, our off-hours section Time Out, and special publications we publish.

RBJ's ideal intern is a team player with excellent writing, speaking and organization skills. Interns should be proficient in Microsoft Office applications and be Internet savvy. Interns must be self-starters studying toward a degree in journalism or communications.

The deadline for submission is Friday, February 29th.
