

NTID Student Development Educators make things happen

January 1, 1998

NTID's Student Life Team is a student-focused department with faculty and staff members and student employees from diverse cultures. It offers a variety of programs and services to NTID and RIT students that encourage personal/social development skills among deaf RIT students. It also serves as a student development resource for faculty, staff, and students throughout the RIT community. Through the Student Development Educators, SLT offers and coordinates experiential "co-curricular" activities and programs such as panel discussions, guest speakers, and other learning opportunities.

This year's Student Development Educators are:

Roberta Mather, Student Development Educator Coordinator, professional and technical communications, Chevy Chase, Maryland

Sarita Cooper, undeclared major, Cleveland, Ohio

Alicia Epstein, professional and technical communications, Lexington, Kentucky

Chris Majeri, social work, Libertyville, Illinois

Anthony Napoli, criminal justice, Irondequoit, New York

Chad Taylor, information technology, Hensall, Ontario, Canada
