For this week’s Studio 86 podcast, I interviewed Jen Loomis, editor in chief of Reporter, RIT’s student-published weekly newsmagazine. Some of the topics we discussed were Reporter itself—including its editorial independence and relationship with RIT President Bill Destler—and Jen’s background (such as family, including her mother—herself a former editor of her college newspaper).

Personally, I was very impressed with the professionalism of Jen and her staff as exhibited in Jen’s recounting of prior editorial decisions regarding Reporter’s coverage of potentially controversial stories. And our conversation was candid in both directions—I shared my analogy of Reporter’s role on campus in comparison with that of News & Events (RIT’s “official” newspaper produced by University News). As I openly stated on the podcast, if you really want to know what’s happening on the RIT campus, you should read Reporter. (This isn’t to say that you shouldn’t read News & Events—but, rather, if you don’t already read Reporter, you should.)

In my opinion, the interview and this Studio 86 episode are the best ones yet in this series’ brief history. In fact, because of that, I’ve already invited Jen back for a follow-up interview sometime next spring. In the meantime, I hope you’ll check out this week’s Studio 86.

Lastly, a couple additional plugs:

• For more about Jen Loomis, read Kelly Downs’ student profile of Jen in the Dec. 6 issue of News & Events.

• And, here’s another great way to keep up on RIT news: Join the new Dateline: RIT Facebook Group at http://rit.facebook.com/group.php?gid=7671747315

Have a great weekend!

-

1. Rudy Pugliese
Dec08

Mike and Jen, Great interview! The entire campus should hear this. It encapsulates what the relationship is between Reporter and the administration. This is the way all college student presses should operate. We're very fortunate to have the people and the policies to produce such a publication (how's that for alliteration?). I'm also looking forward to reading News & Events to find out more about Jen. -Rudy

2. Janie richards
Jan16

why do they say editor in chief instead of editor and chief? i mean is it just like a old-fashioned phase or is it just some . . . way of saying head honcho? i personally think you should change it and this is why. young people such as me in my 7th grade english class were talking about Editor in chief's. So me being the sa that i am asked why do they say that instead of editor and chief. i mean it makes so much more sense and is resonably efficent so i say either change it or give a reason why it should say editor in chief instead of editor and chief. and im i very knowlegeable person so answer the . . . question!!!!!!!

3. Mike Saffran
Jan17

Hi, Lanie, As speculated in your comment, the title “Editor in Chief” has a venerable history (indeed, I suspect it dates far back into the history of journalism as a profession). In that sense, you’re correct: it could be considered “old-fashioned.” I don’t think the title has outlived its usefulness, though, because it signifies the top, or “chief,” editor position (whereas your alternative might seem to imply two distinct positions, editor and chief). Try thinking of it this way: the editor in chief is the “person in charge” (or, as you stated, he or she is the “head honcho”). That said, some publications—including our own News & Events—use titles such as “Executive Editor,” “Managing Editor” and “Deputy Managing Editor” instead of “Editor in Chief.” Thanks for raising a good question—it’s great that you and your classmates debated this topic. And thanks for checking out The Tiger Beat Blog! Mike
One-on-one with the editor in chief of Reporter

The Tiger Beat takes you behind the scenes with the members of RIT University News—the news and public relations division of Rochester Institute of Technology. Get the "story behind the story" and an insider's look at who we are and what we do to publicize RIT news.

more about us »

Recent Comments

- John / Jul 24 The 'abolishment' is corrected
- Justin / Jul 18 RIT goes west
- Jeff / Jul 12 Shine on, classic beauties!
- Brennan / Jun 24 Shine on, classic beauties!
- Will / Jun 17 What to do with all that hardware?
- David / Jun 16 Shine on, classic beauties!
- Nancy / Jun 15 Shine on, classic beauties!
- Mike / Jun 2 Time is running out to talk back to University News
- Ralph / May 30 Time is running out to talk back to University News
- John / May 0 Time sensationalism trumps accuracy in Channel 10 news story

©2006 RIT University News  RIT Home  Subscribe RSS/XML  powered by Wordpress