

Sound Advice for Those Seeking a Job

Bruce A. Austin baagll@rit.edu

12 February 2009

Most currently enrolled Communication majors soon will enter the job market. And they know, their opportunities typically exceed those of their liberal arts peers. That's especially true for RIT grads in communication: PTC, APR, CMT and Journalism majors.

The current issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education (13 February 2009, pp. A30-32) underscores a point long made by the Department of Communication: to get a leg up in the job market – especially one as tight as the current market – make connections with alumni.

Presently, the DOC has more than 400 graduates. They're located all around the globe and hold a broad diversity of rewarding professional positions.

To read the complete Chronicle story: <http://chronicle.com/students>