RIT photo project gives Croatia a try

Democrat and Chronicle - February 28, 2007

HENRIETTA – Rochester Institute of Technology's annual Big Shot photo project is heading to Croatia – only the second time in its 23-year history it has gone international.

Faculty from RIT's School of Photographic Arts and Sciences and its National Technical Institute for the Deaf will set up outside the city walls and stone bridge at the entrance to Dubrovnik's Old Town on April 12. There, they will coordinate hundreds of volunteers armed with flashlights and camera flashes in doing a nighttime shoot.

Dubrovnik has been the home of RIT's American College of Management and Technology for the past decade.

A pair of RIT students will take part in the shoot.

The photo school raised nearly $4,000 to cover their costs, with Nikon Inc. donating $2,500 toward the expenses.

Past Big Shot subjects have included the Alamo, the USS Intrepid while it was docked in New York Harbor and the Royal Palace in Stockholm, Sweden.

For more information about the Big Shot, go to www.rit.edu/bigshot.
